MURDER REIGN ENDED, MANIAC SAYS

Today

Love and Respect,
A Mad Hatter's Party,
Strong Men, One and Two,
Crime, and the Government.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MR. OWEN D. YOUNG, a very able man, says:

"We, more than any one in the world, need an era of good feeling, not only in our own country but elsewhere."

WE NEED THE friendly feeling of other nations, undoubtedly, and should like to have it. However, when a man owes you money he rarely loves you, and we know the real feeling toward us of Europeans that owe us ten billions, plus interest.

THE "GOOD FEELING" of other nations is beyond our control. But their RESPECT we can command.

Enough flying machines, submarines, swift cruisers and common sense would guarantee, from Europe, respect and polite talk.

That's the next best to being loved by them—something not easily arranged.

AT THE MAD HATTER'S tea party, as you well remember, one of the guests put "the very best butter" in his watch, but even that could not make the watch go.

"Nothing seems to please it," said the disappointed guest.

IN NEW YORK yesterday the Federal Reserve reduced the rediscount rate to 2½ per cent, lowest in history, and Wall Street was expected to be happy.

But "nothing seems to please it" either. Stocks went down from 1 to 13 points, those who recently bought without thought turning the other way and selling, more foolishly, without reason.

They are sorry now that they bought originally. They will be sorry later that they sold.

KEMAL PASHA, strong man of Europe No. 2, Mussolini being strong man No. 1, has 10,000 of his Turks fighting savage Kurds entrenched on a mountain. The Kurds, Mohammedans like the Turks, are Orthodox Mohammedans rejecting Kemal's violent changes in their religion.

SOME IN KEMAL'S Army might even desert to the Kurds. They still resent Kemal's order compelling them to wear hats with brims, instead of the old fez, and fear that the order may deprive them of paradise.

The Koran tells them to pray with their heads covered, their foreheads touching the earth. They can't do that with a derby hat, because of the brim.

IN THESE DAYS, somebody murdered may be found almost anywhere. New York is excited about a murderer who writes to a newspaper telling of his killing plans, and carries them out.

In Chicago, a useless automobile is thrown on a junk pile. The police find in it the body of a murdered "alcohol racketeer."

MURDERERS ANNOUNCING their crimes in advance, striking without provocation or reason, are a sufficient worry.

In addition, New York deals with the "building racket," endangering and destroying life when racketeers fail to make blackmail arrangements with builders.

Our "efficient civilization" will be compelled eventually to do something about a crime organization with an income as great as that of the national government.

DR. WU, HEAD of the Chinese mission to lepers, says China neglects control of leprosy. He has seen "thousands of lepers leading a dog's life." Eighteen out of 64 districts have leper settlements.

NOT CHINA ALONE is interested in the fact that 1,000,000 of its inhabitants are victims of a dreadful plague.

Where leprosy spreads, other plagues may spread. And some ten thousand times as dangerous as leprosy, might easily reach out to Western countries.

GRANDI, ITALIAN foreign minister, expresses regret that Italian students should have "demonstrated" impolitely, before the French consul at Bara. That incident is closed.

BUT NOW POLAND is excited because of a new "border death."

A Polish border guard, according to the German statement, passed the frontier, refused to put up his hands when ordered, was shot and killed.

Where gunpowder is, an explosion is always possible. Thank heaven we have not guaranteed any European country against war.

10 ARRESTED IN SLOT BOX ROBBERIES

City Policeman, Pool Room Proprietor, 8 South Side Youths Seized in Round-Up

A city policeman is held without bail and a poolroom proprietor and eight South Side youths are under arrest in connection with several gambling machine robberies in that section.

The patrolman is Herman Shaul, 42, of 158 Banner street. He was arrested early this morning and ordered held without bail by Magistrate John J. Sweeney after two youths, seized on suspicion, had charged him with having received a share of money taken from three slot machines stolen from the New York lunch room, operated by Harry Pappas, 1925 Carson street.

IMPLICATE OTHER YOUTHS

John Carton, 17, of 16 Childs street, and John Sulkowski, 17, of 45 South Nineteenth street, arrested in Carson street last night, implicated the patrolman and the other youths. After questioning they admitted, according to police, having entered Pappas' restaurant three times.

On the first two occasions, they said, they took nearly $100 from the machines, and on their third visit, removed the machines to a pool room at 1911 Sarah street, operated by Franklin Schultz, 34.

Schultz was arrested after the

GIRL IN STREET UNCONSCIOUS

A young woman was found lying, semi-conscious, at Harriett and Roup streets early today by Charles Hultin, cab driver, of 5120 Butler street.

From a purse in her pocket police obtained the name Marion Krutuille, 918 Locust street, North Braddock. She is aged about 20.

West Penn Hospital attendants said her skull probably was fractured and she had suffered bruises on the head and shoulder.

Police believe she may have been thrown from an automobile.

Unidentified Body Discovered in River

Two employes at Lock No. 1, Allegheny River at Twenty-first street, while clearing the wickets today, found the body of an unidentified man, about 70, in the river. The only identification clue found on him was a watch-fob bearing the initial W. In his pocket was a gold seal ring with the monogram obliterated. He was attired in a blue coat, a brown sweater vest and black trousers. The body was removed to the morgue.

CITIZENS FIGHT BLAST PERIL IN BRENTWOOD

Borough Residents Declare Road-Building Operations Are Ruining Their Homes

Twenty-five citizens of Brentwood today organized a protective committee to bring legal action for relief from blasting which, they declare, has damaged 35 homes in the borough and endangered lives of inhabitants.

The blasting is being done by the contractors constructing the new Clairton state road of the Sawmill Run boulevard.

Henry Hayes, of 4010 Lanmore avenue, Brentwood, said appeals to borough, county and state authorities have been futile.

"WRECKING HOMES"

Hayes declared today:

"There isn't a room or pair of steps in my home that doesn't have plaster scattered all over.

"The foundation of my dwelling has been cracked, the cellar floor has sunk an inch and the floor of my garage has sunk six inches.

"When it's all over, the contractors can have my home if there is anything left of it or if there is anything left of me."

"STONE PIERCED ROOF"

One stone weighing 15 pounds, he declared, crashed through the roof of the home of Albert Unruh,

Stocks Slip, Steel Hits Year's Low

Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The stock market again broke wide open in the early trading today, prominent shares losing 2 to 11 points and several reaching new low ground for the year or lower.

United States Steel common tumbled $4 to $134.25, a new low for the year and only $4.75 above the November low. American Can dropped nearly $4 to a new low for 1930, and Allied Chemical recorded a new minimum price for the movement at $240, off $11.

Stocks were again sold in blocks of 1,000 to 10,000 shares, with the ticker a few minutes late. Traders were evidently disappointed by the further drop in prices yesterday, in the face of the reduction in the New York Federal Reserve rediscount rate and large drop in brokers' loans. Professional bear selling appeared on a large scale.

Bishop Mann Sails For London Session

NEW YORK, June 21.—(INS.)—American bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church sailed today on the Cunard liner Samaria to attend a world conference in London next month. Among them were H. K. Burleson, David Lincoln Ferris, Alexander Mann, E. J. Fitzmaurice, William M. Green, J. C. Ward, W. Blair Roberts, H. J. Mickel, James De Wold Perry and E. L. Randall. Bishop Mann is from Pittsburgh.

SLAYER OF 2 BIDS U. S. FAREWELL

Mission Completed With Recovery of Documents, Going to Europe, He Says

International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Another letter from the Queens "petting-party" maniac killer was received by the New York Journal today, in which the killer, believed to have murdered two New York men whose bodies were found in parked automobiles, declared his reign of terror was ended.

In his final letter to the Journal, the writer said his mission of recovering missing documents of an international secret society had been completed and that he was returning at once to Europe.

The handwriting resembled previous letters to the newspaper in which the killer forecast his murders.

"MISSION ENDED"

The letter was believed to be from the same man who wrote the first warnings.

"There is no further cause for worry," said the letter received today. "My mission is ended. The documents have been recovered."

The writer said the documents were one relating to the military, one dealing with political matters and a third commercial.

He said the third and final of the missing documents was recovered June 19, the night he had warned he would kill his third victim at College Point, Long Island.

In his latest communication the maniac scored New York police for their tactics in questioning Catherine May, the girl who sat beside Joseph Mozynski, the killer's first victim, and Betty Ring, who sat in an automobile with Noel Sowley, the second man shot to death.

SEARCH CONTINUES

The writer warned he would be en route to Europe when the letter was received and that any letters received after today would be "fakes."

The final letter was signed in code, which the writer asked the newspaper not to reveal.

Meanwhile police continued search for the maniac killer.

Five suspects were released or sent to observation today. Search was made particularly for a man, whose name was kept secret, who once directed a boys' club at a church in Brooklyn.

The Rev. Joseph V. Cooper, Brooklyn pastor, said the man suffered hallucinations. One was that international villains were threatening him. The man disappeared several weeks ago.

Dry Officers Dump Beer at Sharpsburg

More than 3,700 gallons of beer gurgled into the Allegheny River at the foot of Nineteenth street, Sharpsburg, today, as prohibition agents smashed 107 barrels and 18 half barrels.

The consignment was seized in a freight car on a Pennsylvania Railroad siding in Sharpsburg early today. It had been consigned to a Millvale firm.

BOROUGH BACKS BLUE LAWS

Edgeworth approves the closed Sunday of Pennsylvania by its returns in the Blue Law poll of Allegheny County conducted by the Sun-Telegraph. The sentiment of the borough, expressed by a majority of its ballots in the poll, favors continuance of the existing law.

The canvass of Edgeworth to date has yielded a heavy return, the total of 121 votes in the poll representing about 50 per cent of the total number of ballots, 255, cast in the borough in the recent primary election. The votes are divided as follows:

	Men	Women	Total
For the Blue Laws	57	9	66
For modification..	4	2	6
For repeal.....	42	7	49

The latest tabulation of ballots in the poll throughout the county leaves unchanged the ratio of five votes for repeal for each vote for enforcement. The totals are:

	Men	Women	Total
Enforcement	4,167	3,425	7,592
Modification	2,356	1,390	3,746
Repeal.....	26,271	12,199	38,470

The latest boroughs to be included in the poll are Verona, Versailles and Wall, leaving but six boroughs, of all subdivisions of the county, to which the canvass has not yet been extended.

TARIFF BATTLE STARTS ANEW

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(Universal.)—A swift and determined campaign to sell the bitterly assailed tariff measure to the country, motivated by the administration, today was under way as its foes prepared to make it their chief campaign issue.

First steps were taken when President Hoover forecast an immediate and wholesale shakeup of the Tariff Commission, to improve the workings of the recent law, and when Secretary of the Treasury Mellon declared the newly-enacted measure had removed an obstacle to business.

Administration action was shaped swiftly at a White House conference. President Hoover, Mr. Mellon and Secretary of State Stimson went over the whole situation created by the Smoot-Hawley act, including the retaliatory temper of foreign governments.

Selection of new commissioners will be made at once. Their names will be sent to the Senate for confirmation before adjournment, Mr. Hoover said.

Mellon praised the Smoot-Hawley tariff as ending months of uncertainty. He saw in the flexible provisions a promise of more business-like revision in the future, contributing to business stability.

Senator Harrison (Dem.), of Mississippi, declared in the Senate that the tariff will be the foremost issue in the congressional campaigns.

NATIVE STATE GREETS BYRD

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(INS.)—Richard Evelyn Byrd, whose North and South Polar flights have thrilled the world, will be back among the home folks in old Virginia today—for the first time in nearly two years.

After two days of a homecoming welcome, genuine and noisy, Byrd was scheduled to leave the capital for Richmond by train at noon. Tomorrow he will be in Winchester, his home town, where his ancestors have lived since the days of Colonial Virginia.

Byrd took with him today a special gold medal struck off by the National Geographic Society to commemorate his flight across the South Pole and his scientific contribution to the world. And he took a memory of the praises of the President of the United States and the admiration of the citizenry of the capital, and of New York.

Last night from the hands of the President he received his medal, heard praises of himself and of his crew of 42 men who went to Little America with him and the 38 who operated his New Zealand base.

KOPPERS, RUSS WEIGH BIG DEAL

Officials of the Koppers Company admitted today that informal discussions had been held with representatives of the Soviet government of Russia over the possibility of constructing several batteries of by-product coke ovens in that country.

They denied that any orders have been placed or that the negotiations have reached any definite stage.

In view of the Soviet program for modernizing its industries, it is considered probable that some of the largest installations of by-product ovens in the world may eventually be made.

These plans have not taken definite shape up to the present time.

It had been reported that an $18,000,000 contract had been awarded by the Soviet government for 456 ovens divided into eight batteries of 57 ovens each.

Three years ago the Koppers company installed four batteries of 83 ovens each at Clairton. At that time the order was regarded as exceptionally large.

Ruth Snyder's Child Loses $95,000 Insurance

NEW YORK, June 21.—(INS.)—Lorraine Snyder, 12-year-old daughter of Ruth Snyder, today lost $95,000 insurance money following a decision of the appellate division of the Supreme Court which affirmed a lower court decision that the policies of her father, Albert E. Snyder, were obtained fraudulently.

Snyder was murdered in 1927 by his wife and Judd Gray, who planned to collect on his two insurance policies, one for $45,000, carrying double indemnity, and one for $5,000.

The murderers died in the electric chair in 1928, leaving Lorraine as the sole heir.

The lower court held that Mrs Snyder had conspired in obtaining the policies and that the amount was not filled in when Snyder signed them.

Mrs. Hoover Refurnishes President's Office

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(Universal.)—When President Hoover entered his office at the White House today he found an antique maple desk which cost $6,000, in the place of the one used by three of his predecessors.

He also found new chairs, in rich and brilliant velvet brocade, which cost $600 each, and a circular rug which cost $2,500.

All were selected by Mrs. Hoover, who completely reversed the plans for refurnishing the President's office, destroyed by fire last Christmas.

Interior decorators had selected a red rug. Mrs. Hoover rejected it and ordered one of brown, with a circle of green and yellow around it. She also picked out the desk and the chairs.

All were moved in late yesterday when the President left his office. It was a surprise to the President today. Mrs. Hoover had hoped to be here, but has been at the presidential lodge in Virginia recovering from a serious injury to her back. However, she talked over the long-distance telephone and superintended all arrangements.

THREAT OF GAG RULE LOOMS AGAINST FOES OF NAVAL PACT

NO QUARTER, ATTITUDE OF BACKERS

Administration Determined To Jam Treaty Through In Face of Critics' Protest

By FRASER EDWARDS,
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Cloture gag-rule, applied to jam the League of Nations and the League Court agreements through the Senate, loomed today as the method the administration intends to use in an effort to force ratification of the London Naval Treaty.

So great is their rush to ratify the pact, which took four months to negotiate at London, the administration leaders already are dangling the cloture threat over the heads of treaty opponents.

"We have the votes and we will put the treaty through in a week or 10 days, at most," said Senator McNary, of Oregon, assistant Republican leader, in discussing the outlook for action on the treaty at the forthcoming special session of the Senate.

FOES PREPARED

Opponents are prepared to meet this disregard of their rights and the patriotic protests against the treaty, which have begun to deluge the Senate. They intend to prolong the fight that the country may learn the details of the intricate document.

Senator George H. Moses, of New Hampshire, president pro tempore of the Senate, said:

"It is significant that the cloture is always the weapon of those who want to put something through the Senate in the interest of some foreign nation."

Moses recalled that the cloture rule was invoked in the unsuccessful attempt to drag the United States into the League of Nations and again to gag the opponents of the League Court in 1926. It was used again to force ratification of the Isle of Pines treaty.

"BITTER MEDICINE"

After presenting to the Senate Thursday night's radio speech of Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, one of the American delegates of the London conference, to print in the Congressional Record, Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, said he hoped treaty advocates would continue to shed some light on the "astonishing document."

He said:

"We're not progressing, and at the rate of progress that we are making we may hope that time will be given our people to learn something about this astonishing document, which like a dose of bitter medicine, it is insisted, our people must swallow at once with their eyes shut."

Next week the matter will be definitely settled, so far as the Senate Foreign Relations Committee considering the document is concerned. It has agreed to vote on the pact Monday.

It is considered likely the treaty would be before the Senate, called in special session, by July 7. Senator Borah indicated it would be dealt with within a week.

HOUSE VOTES FUND FOR NEW POSTOFFICE

Complete Appropriations For Pittsburgh Building Passed; Sent to Senate

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The House today had passed the second deficiency bill, carrying full appropriations for the new federal building previously authorized for Pittsburgh.

Before the funds are made finally available, similar action must be taken by the Senate. After which Treasury Department officials will proceed with final plans for the structure.

The Pittsburgh funds are included in a special $25,000,000 item intended to cover all projects for which initial but incomplete appropriations have been granted. Passage of the measure is expected in the Senate next week.

DRY FUND DENIED

The bill carries $67,712,000 for contingencies in government operation, including $10,660,000 for work on Boulder Canyon Dam.

An allotment of $250,000 for the Hoover Law Enforcement Commission was stricken from the bill on a point of order by Representative LaGuardia (Rep.), New York, on the ground there was no law authorizing the appropriation. With it went a reappropriation of $80,000 of unexpended funds.

The measure also carried authority for the expenditure of $51,000,000 for the settlement of war claims to German and Austrian nationals.

FUNDS FOR PRISONS

The sums of $4,766,497 was set aside for penal institutions, $1,700,000 being allotted for a new penitentiary in the northeastern states. It carried $325,000 for a narcotic farm at Lexington, Ky.

The measure provided $2,200,000 for the Veterans' Bureau; $3,500,000 for forest roads and trails; $1,426,463 for the Navy Department, and $1,700,000 for air mail contracts.

An increase from $14,250,000 to $21,000,000 was allowed for a postoffice at Chicago. Cleveland was allowed $5,275,00 for a new postoffice.

HOUSE QUIZ OF CANNON PROPOSED

Tinkham Waives Immunity For Fresh Attack on Activities of Bishop

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The fight to force Bishop James Cannon, Jr., to make a full disclosure of his expenditures in the anti-Smith campaign continued today.

Dissatisfied with the failure of the Senate Lobby Committee to obtain the Bishop's testimony, Representative Shafer (Rep.), of Wisconsin, said he is preparing a resolution for appointment of a House investigating committee.

AWAITS CANNON'S MOVE

Representative Tinkham (Rep.), of Massachusetts, arch-foe of the bishop, was awaiting action from Cannon after he accepted the bishop's challenge to subject himself to a libel suit by throwing off the cloak of congressional immunity.

ANSWERS CHALLENGE

The Massachusetts representative issued a statement in which he said:

"Lest Bishop Cannon shall delude anyone into thinking the charges which I made against him in the House of Representatives were unfounded, and meeting his challenge that I divest myself of my congressional immunity, I desire to restate over my signature the charges I made in the House of Representatives."

The bishop today was at his desk here in the office of the Methodist Board of Temperance and Social Service.

Asked if he intended to proceed with legal action against Tinkham, the bishop snapped:

"I'll act in my own way. I will issue a statement when I get ready and in my own way, and I don't need the press to ask me about it, either."

That ended the interview.

CHARGED LAW VIOLATED

Tinkham in his House speech asserted Cannon had violated the corrupt practices act in failing to report campaign contributions; that he received $65,300 from E. C. Jameson, New York capitalist, and has not yet accounted for $48,300.

The first defense of Cannon in Congress was made by Representative Shaffer (Rep.), of Virginia.

"Say what you will about Bishop Cannon. He is bold and fearless and can take care of himself. Go out in the open, meet him and strike him from the front."

SIPLE EAGER TO GET HOME

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Paul Siple, of Erie, Pa., Boy Scout extraordinary, has spent 14 months at the South Pole with Commander Byrd and has been feted here by President Hoover, by the Pennsylvania delegation in Congress, and by the students of Central High School, but all he can think of now is to get back to his Erie home and to go on with work in biology. For the moment his plans are indefinite. He doesn't know on what date he will start for Erie.

Paul, who was selected from several thousand Scouts as their representative on Byrd's trip, said he expected to go back to Allegheny College, at Meadville, Pa., to finish the last three years of his course there. He thinks he may continue with graduate work somewhere, specializing in biology. Paul helped in the biological laboratory maintained by the expedition.

GRAVE ROBBED IN DEATH HOAX

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 21.—(AP.)—An attempted $25,000 insurance fraud involving the robbing of a grave and burning of an automobile, was revealed by state police. The inquiry extended to Detroit in an effort to ascertain where the body was procured.

The attempted fraud was revealed after police had questioned Charles Kaldes, formerly of this city, brought here from New York. He admitted his complicity and implicated his cousin, Kostes Haldos, of Reading, now serving a term in a Detroit jail. Kaldes said he did not know where the body was procured. Police believe it was taken from a grave in Pennsylvania and will quiz Haldos.

Two years ago Kaldes took out two life insurance policies on himself with Haldos as beneficiary. A double indemnity clause for accidental death raised the value to $25,000. Kaldes disappeared and a charred body was found in a burned automobile on the outskirts of Hershey. The body was tentatively identified as that of Kaldes and Haldos sought to collect on the insurance policies.

RUMORS 'BUNK,' CLARA SAYS

DALLAS, Tex., June 21.—(INS.)—"I love Harry Richman very much. I did not come to Dallas to settle any alienation suit, and I deny any statement that was published that I did."

Shaking her flame-haired head angrily, Clara Bow, just out of her pillow-bedecked bed and clad in a gorgeous scarlet lounging robe, made that statement in an interview with International News Service.

"I came here to visit my friends and get a rest before going into my next picture in Hollywood. I am on a two-week vacation now," the vivacious screen flapper exponent declared. "Yes, I talked with Harry. He called me from New York and wanted to know about this dope in the papers about my coming to Dallas to see a boy friend. I told him it was all the bunk.

"I am leaving Dallas of my own free will. I have not been ordered back to Hollywood by Will Hays and have never had any communication with him"

Court Fines Man For False Claim

Sam Morfetas, a Greek, of Protectory place, was fined $200 in Federal court for making a false statement to the district director of immigration in an application for registry as an alien. At the time he claimed he had never been arrested or convicted. He was found guilty at the last term of court, when the government established that Morfetas had been convicted on a liquor charge and had served 60 days in jail, records show.

Westmoreland War Pensions Granted

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(AP.)—Pensions and claims of Westmoreland County residents arising out of the Civil, Spanish-American and World Wars were granted as follows, Representative Wyant, of Greensburg, announced:

John P. Baughman, Jeannette, $90; Mrs. Elizabeth A. Palmer, Acme, $30, and James Hudson, Irwin, $40.

2 FACE COURT IN HOLDUP

Harry Andreini, Miller street, and David Manning, Vickroy street, were to have preliminary hearings in Central Police Court today for the holdup of John B. Stauff, messenger for the South Hills Trust Company, and the theft of $2,300 from Stauff last Monday. Andreini was captured in McKees Rocks and the money recovered about two hours after the robbery. Manning was arrested two days later.

A representative of the district attorney's office will attend the police court hearing to determine whether charges of manslaughter or murder can be brought against the pair as a result of Stauff's death. The bank messenger died Tuesday night in Passavant Hospital from shock as a result of the holdup.

The pair also are to be given hearings on charges of robbing Regis Carr in his home in West Lacock street last March. In escaping from the Carr home the robbers were trailed to Fifth avenue and Magee street and Detective Florence Brunner, who gave chase, was shot.

It was immediately after the Carr holdup that Constable John Schneider, of the First Ward, is alleged to have helped Andreini to escape arrest by influencing Motorcycle Patrolman Fred Smith to release him.

OPPOSE FLORAL GIFTS BY CITY

Free flowers hurt the business of florists, according to a communication received by Council.

That body, violating all traditions, will meet today to consider that and other matters. It is the first Saturday meeting of Council in years, scheduled only because the members are thinking of summer vacations.

Harry B. Ackerman and W. T. Usinger signed the protest about flowers. They complained about gifts of floral pieces to lodges churches and fraternal organizations. The cause, they wrote, was worthy in every case, but they insisted the city should not furnish flowers free of charge.

SHARP BUSINESS GAIN IN WEEK

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(Universal.)—A sharp upturn in business took place during the week ended June 14, the Department of Commerce reported today.

Commercial transactions, as measured by the volume of checks presented for payment, were more than 6 per cent greater than for the preceding week and were only 10 per cent under the unusually high level of 1929.

The volume of building in 37 states, as shown by the value of contracts awarded, showed substantial gains over both the preceding week and the corresponding week last year.

The falling off in steel operations noticeable in May appeared to be definitely checked, the index having remained the same for the past three weeks.

The falling off in wholesale commodity prices continued, but the recession was only fractional, being less than ½ of 1 per cent.

STAR ATHLETE, STUDENT ELOPE

John L. McQuillen, Shady Side Academy star athlete, and Betty Lawton Crawford, Peabody High School senior, are honeymooning somewhere today. They were married in Wellsburg, W. Va., yesterday. Betty's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. N. Crawford, Jr., of 5835 Morrowfield avenue, were expecting a wire or phone call to tell them where the young couple are and when they expect to return for the parental blessing.

The young couple dropped in at the McQuillen home, 1209 Farragut street, yesterday afternoon long enough to report to a maid that they were married, but they stayed only a few minutes. J. J. McQuillen, father of the bridegroom and president of the Universal Packing Corporation, is out of town.

The bridegroom is captain of the Shady Side basketball team and a former captain of the football team.

Negro Wields Jug In Fight, Police Say

Police today were searching for Walter Anderson, Negro, in connection with an alleged attack upon his son-in-law, Joseph Glasgow, 30, Negro, who was found early this morning in Sachem alley. AUTO SUSPECT HELD BANDIT

Charles Martin, 18, of 1223 Arch street, held by police for an alleged attempt to steal an automobile, today, police say, was identified as one of the bandits who held up four gasoline service stations on the North Side recently. Victims of the robberies, police say, picked young Martin during a standup at the police station in Woods Run last night.

Martin was arrested yesterday with William Russell, 17, of the North Side, after the two are alleged to have stolen the automobile of Joseph Colebob, federal narcotic agent, from in front of Colebob's home, in Sampson street. Russell, police say, attempted to shoot Colebob when cornered.

Gang Fear Gags Suspect In Stark Rum Swindle

PHILADELPHIA, June 21.—Retribution today has overtaken one of two men who swindled Sidney L. Stark, Pittsburgh manufacturer, in a sand-for-liquor hoax.

Gagged by fear of gangland's swift penalty, Clifford Peteit, 35, mechanical engineer, decided to take the rap rather than tell on the unidentified accomplice he declared is the real culprit.

And Stark, who laughingly admitted he is still thirsty, though he has tracked down and jailed one of his swindlers, is still out the $580 paid for the sand he thought was liquor to say nothing of the loss of time and financial expense of staying here to testify.

Stark came here May 29 to get "some choice whisky" for a Memorial Day party back home, where, he said, he has an office at 929 Oliver Building, is a manufacturer of traffic signals and a member of a prominent family.

With a Pittsburgh companion whose identity he has shielded, Stark met Peteit and through Peteit a second Philadelphian, with the result that five sacks supposed to contain 12 quarts of whisky each were placed in the rear of his automobile and he turned over $580. He rode as far as Bryn Mawr College before he decided to take a look at the liquor—and found five bags of sand.

He back-trailed to Philadelphia, and put police on the trail.

Peteit declared from the witness stand he knew nothing about sand, believing the deal had a bona fide one for liquor.

Led by the mystery ship in which Dale Jackson, noted St. Louis pilot, set a new speed record of one hours and 50 minutes from New York to Pittsburgh, nearly 50 airplanes will participate in an aerial parade from McKeesport to Pittsburgh and return, following which the afternoon will be devoted to exhibitions of daring and skill by the Curtiss-Wright stunt team, on tour of the country.

$3,000 FAKE FOILED BY WIDOW

Gets Back Her Life-Savings, Brings About Arrest of Self-Styled 'Benefactor'

Mrs. Mary Murch, of Finleyville, is through with "get-rich-quick" schemes.

She learned her lesson and, with the $3,000 in $20 bills which she hoped to turn into $20,000, on the promise of a glib-tongued countryman, presented herself at the Finleyville National Bank when its doors opened this morning to deposit her life savings.

She says Dan Agustovich, of McKeesport, and another man told her yesterday when they called at her home in Finleyville:

"Look, I've got plenty of money and I want to help poor people."

The unsuspecting woman, a widow and mother of eight young children, was impressed. She declares he told her that her brother-in-law, Jack Murch, of Donora, was in trouble.

PROMISED TO HELP

Agustovich and his public benefactor friend then promised, she avers:

"If you get $3,000 to help him, we'll put up $20,000 and you'll get it all back yourself."

Mrs. Murch hurried to the bank and withdrew the money. The strangers then displayed a satchel supposedly full of $20 bills. They boarded an interurban car and got off near Bethel, walking a short distance toward Pittsburgh, then turning off into a country lane in Bethel Township.

In a quiet, wooded place, both men turned on the woman and demanded she turn over the $3,000. They seized her pocketbook and ran.

Screaming for help, she turned back toward the Library road and enlisted the aid of residents. O. L. Black, of Monongahela, a passerby, notified Constable Ben W. Smith, who hurriedly organized a posse for the hunt.

CAPTURED BY POSSE

After a brief chase, Israel D. Bimbo, Negro, and John A. Milligan, two members of the posse, captured Agustovich. When taken, he had the $3,000, still bound in banking clips, $500 to a bundle in his possession, his captors said. The other man eluded the searchers in an all-night hunt.

Augustovich, confessing to the robbery, treated the whole thing as a joke, explaining:

"Just an 'old army game.'"

Constable Smith retorted:

"This is another 'old army game.'"

He slipped handcuffs on the prisoner and led him to jail, to await a hearing Monday before Justice of the Peace Charles W. Linepensel, of Bethel Township, on charges of robbery, assault and battery.

JURY'S VERDICT REVERSED

Judge James H. Gray, of Common Pleas Court, handed down a decision yesterday reversing the action of a jury in awarding John Guess a verdict of $1,236 for injuries received, when the Cow Run Bridge, near Mayview, collapsed July 18, 1928, killing John M. Egloff.

Guess, a Negro, lived in North Braddock and had brought suit against the county for his hurts. However, in rendering an opinion on a motion made by Artemus Leslie, assistant solicitor of Allegheny County, for judgment for the county, notwithstanding the verdict, the court decides that the contractor, Thomas George, violated a permit issued for the transportation of a steam shovel and a truck. Judge Gray finds that the county assumed no obligation to carry a 30-ton load. A new trial asked by the plaintiff was refused and the jury's verdict reversed in favor of the county. This action puts three other suits against the county in jeopardy.

Sanders was scheduled to be executed July 11 when he received his commutation.

youths said he had received a share of the money.

At the hearing this morning, the youths said Patrolman Shaul was standing at Nineteenth and Carson streets when they robbed the restaurant. They declared the officer knew of the robberies, and charged that on the last occasion, they gave him $4 in quarters which they had taken from a machine.

SHAUL ENTERS DENIAL

Denying the charges, Shaul said:

"I was busy on those nights, and did not know of the robberies, but I am sure I never received money from these boys at any time."

Pappas admitted to Magistrate Sweeney that two slot machines in his restaurant had been emptied twice and then stolen. He was fined $50 by the magistrate on a charge of maintaining a gambling device.

The others under arrest are John Mours, 16, of 1813 Carey street; Felix Dechmeroski, 16, of 2018 Carson street; Frank Turek, 17, of 1914 Fox way; Joseph Rusnak, 17, of 2004 Eighteenth street; John Schroder, 18, of 1213 Muriel street, and John Minaskas, 16, of 1815 Park way. According to Fazio's own story, he paid $350,000 in graft to police officials and politicians in the county during the seven years he was engaged in the beer business.

Many tips have been received at the detective bureau regarding Fazio's whereabouts, but all have proved false. Detectives have followed up several leads given them, making trips to several out-of-town places in search of Fazio, who last week was acquitted of the murder of William Gregory.

FUMES OF FILM FIRE PERIL 10

ATLANTA, June 21.—(AP.)—Ten persons, including newspapermen, firemen and attaches, who inhaled fumes from burning X-ray films at Grady Hospital, were under the observation of physicians today while authorities supervised the return of 250 Negro patients, removed during the fire.

Dr. Frank Lavieri, of Chicago, was overcome by smoke and James Jones, a Negro orderly, credited by hospital authorities with assisting in the removal of 20 patients, collapsed.

Two policemen were knocked down by the force of one of the explosions. Hospital officials said a large amount of X-ray equipment was destroyed but that property damage was slight.

HOOVER BUSY, CANCELS TRIP

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(Universal)—President Hoover late yesterday canceled invitations to 20 of his friends to be his guests at his Rapidan, Va., fishing camp today and tomorrow.

He did so, it was learned, because of pressure of business during the legislative jam of the closing days of the Congress session.

The President said he would like to go to the Rapidan camp to join his wife, who is recovering from an injury in a fall three months ago.

His son, Allan, who has been at the camp for one week, returned to the White House yesterday and is going to work Monday for the American Radiator Corporation as part of his course in business administration at Harvard University.

BOOKS OPENED IN STEEL SUIT

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 21.—Judge David G. Jenkins, of Mahoning County Common Pleas Court, ruled Bethlehem Steel Corporation must open its books to anti-merger accountants, permitting them to inspect records bearing on the merger with Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company.

The judge did not rule on the motion asking an order to compel Bethlehem to produce the records at the trial, advising he would decide this point during the hearing of the case.

Attorneys for C. S. Eaton, Cleveland, had asked that Bethlehem be required to produce all books, audits, financial reports and other data bearing on the merger. They asked this information for the six-year period ending December 31, 1929.

Eaton attorneys have contended that inasmuch as their clients are to receive Bethlehem stock under terms of the merger, they have a right to know the real value of the stock and that this can be learned only by examination of Bethlehem's books.

Attorneys for Bethlehem contend the merger cannot be attacked in court on grounds of inadequacy in the terms, declaring the court cannot interfere unless fraud is specifically shown.

CITIZENS FIGHT BLAST PERIL

4014 Lanmore street. Mrs. Unruh has been confined to her home suffering from nervous shock, he declared.

According to Hayes, the state highway department promised to compel the contractors, S. J. Groves & Sons, to reduce the dynamite charges, but said "the charges seem to be stronger than ever."

W. H. Drath, superintendent of the contracting firm, said today:

"There is some little damage, but it is greatly exaggerated.

"The blast holes have not been overloaded. In fact, we are using much less explosive than we would use if we had been constructing the road in the country district."

PLAN ANNEXATION DRIVE

He declared the crashing of the stone through the roof of the Unruh home was due to the fact that one of the blast holes "shot out"—a technical term meaning that the explosive shot straight up instead of moving the earth sideways.

He declared that this carried upwards about a yard of earth and debris.

Borough authorities declare they cannot do anything to stop the blasting, according to Hayes.

As a result, he said, a group of citizens is laying plans for a fight to annex the borough to the City of Pittsburgh.

GIRL HURT

Hayes said his daughter, May, aged 3, standing near her home, 300 feet from the scene of the blasting, was injured when debris, hurtling through the air, struck her on the hand.

E. W. Hagerling, 3950 Lanmore avenue, barely escaped injury when a stone came hurtling through the dining room window of his home, he declared.

Assistant Division Engineer H. R. Wertz, of the State Highway Department, was in communication with the contracting firm officials today over the situation.

An offer by E. W. Edwards, Cincinnati manufacturer, to purchase all shares of Valvoline Oil Company stock now held by Paragon, will also be considered.

LINGLE MURDER GUN TRACED

CHICAGO, June 21.—(INS.)—Authorities investigating the gang murder of Alfred J. Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, announced today that the snub-nosed revolver dropped by the slayer once was owned by Frank Foster, gangster aide of Alphonse (Scarface) Capone. A nation-wide search has been started for Foster.

Although the pistol that killed Lingle has been definitely traced to Foster, police believe he had no direct connection with the murder.

Foster, formerly chief lieutenant for George (Bugs) Moran, recently deserted the Moran forces to share the fortunes of Capone, and this desertion was regarded as the underlying motive for the attempt to implicate him in the slaying, which climaxed a week of gang carnage.

While the investigation of Lingle's murder went forward Chicago's new acting police commissioner, John (Iron Man) Alcock, continued his sweeping shakeup of the police department, which was designed to break gang control.

Another gang murder—the first since the slaying of Lingle—continued to baffle county authorities today. The victim was Lorenzo Juliano, lieutenant of Capone, and alcohol czar of Southern Cook County.

3-Year-Old Jones 'Knew' Golfing Dad Would Win

ATLANTA, June 21.—(INS.)—Huh, I knew they couldn't beat my daddy.

This was the nonchalant comment of Bobby Jones' young son, Bobby, Jr., when the radio announced the Atlanta marvel had won the British open championship. Young Bobby is all of three years old.

But Clara, 5-year-old daughter, was a little more uneasy about it. From the time the radio was turned on until it announced Bobby had won, Clara kept her ear close to the loud speaker, turning often to inquire:

"Are they beating my daddy? I don't think they can."

She was elated over the news of her father's victory, and now the children are looking forward to the triumphant home-coming.

Mrs. Robert P. Jones, mother of Bobby, was tremendously pleased. She said:

"His father and I are extremely proud of him. I think he is a wonder to go into this tournament after the strain of the British amateur and win it, too."

Bobby's father said:

"I am very happy and very proud. There is very little I can add to that. It was quite a feat."

Langdon Turns Love Balm Suit Into Free Comedy

LOS ANGELES, June 21.—(AP.)—Laughter today broke the somberness which has marked testimony in Thomas J. O'Brien's suit to collect $11,500 from Harry Langdon, film comedian. The suit is based on Langdon's alleged alienation of affections of O'Brien's former wife, now Mrs. Langdon.

The comedian was testifying concerning a trip to San Francisco in 1927, and to his relations then with the present Mrs. Langdon. He said he went to Golden Gate Park with Mrs. O'Brien, her daughter and a maid. Bayard Rountree, plaintiff's counsel, started the fun.

"It's a nice quiet park, isn't it Mr. Langdon?" he inquired.

"Yes, very romantic," retorted the actor, his face a bland mask.

"What else did you do while you were in San Francisco?"

"Oh, well, we went out to the Cliff House and to Golden Gate Park and places," Langdon answered, without a hint of a smile. "I took off my shoes once on the beach and walked in the water."

Superior Judge Samuel Blake joined the spectators in laughter.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Miss Elliott Marrying Today

A very small and lovely wedding is taking place this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock in the beautiful garden of the home of the William Swan Elliotts, of Woodland road. And the bride is, of course, their daughter, Margaret Alexander Elliott, and the bridegroom is Louis Eberhard Nohl, of New York. Margaret is having no attendants at all. Francis Cochran, of New York, is the best man.

The wedding, as I said before, is a very small affair, with only the members of the families present and a few intimate friends.

Tall urns filled with flowers are placed on either side of the long garden walk, at the end of which is the altar, reached by walking through an arch of rambler roses. The altar is placed within a circle composed of triangular beds of marigold, low pink roses, blue delphinium and red roses, and tiny fir trees are placed in a square formation about the circle, and the whole lovely garden is hedged in with tall trees and shrubbery.

The bride is wearing an extremely interesting medieval gown of creme net, very close fitting to the hips, then flaring in three panels to the ground. The sleeves are long and tight, with cuffs of rose point lace, and a fichu of the same lace falls in a soft cascade from the neckline. The skirt of the gown extends in a long train in the back. Her veil of net has a cap of point Angleterre lace, having two panels of the lace extending down over the train, with bands of net on either side. And she is carrying white orchids and lilies of the valley.

The bride's mother is wearing a gown of beige lace with a hat of tulle in the same shade.

After the ceremony there is a buffet supper in the home for 50 people. The whole house is filled with spring flowers. The bridegroom's uncle and aunt, the Geraldus Lansing Millers, of Englewood, N. J., are here for the wedding, and other out-of-town guests include Mrs. LeRoy Clark and Graham Clark, of Englewood; Mrs. Goodloe McDowell, of Cedarhurst, L. I.; Prebens Martins, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Wallace McCormick, of Baltimore; the John Wintersteens, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Oliver Boutwell Merrill, Jr., of New York.

At noon today Elizabeth Telfer honored Margaret with a luncheon in the Longue Vue Country Club. Thirty-two guests, friends of the bride out-of-town guests, were there. Decorations were in pink and blue with the tables centered with pink roses and blue delphinium.

Margaret is a graduate of Rosemary Hall and of Smith, class of 1926, and her fiance of Columbia, class of 1922.

College Club Garden Unit Proposed

Tentative steps towards the formation of a garden department within the College Club were taken yesterday at the garden party which Mrs. Nathaniel Spear gave for the club. No definite plans can be made, however, until the matter is taken up by the board of directors in the fall, but a motion in favor of such a group was accepted by the president, Mrs. Ralph E. Davis.

All the women were entranced with Mrs. Spear's garden, with its row upon row of gorgeous roses, stately lilies, foxglove, some especially large begonias and the many other lovely blooms and the odd Japanese and Chinese carved stones and the miniature Japanese garden which make it so distinctive and unusual.

Refreshments were served in the shaded circle of the rockery, where the uncarved stones from seats and a nearby streamlet takes its musical way over great moss-covered slabs.

Mrs. Spear was assisted by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Nathaniel Spear, Jr.

For a thoroughly miscellaneous program, that of the Travellers' Club for 1930-31 is to be recommended. Such widely diverse topics as "Woman's Progress in Egypt," a history of the club, a talk on welfare, "Traveling in California," "American Antiques," "The House of My Dreams," "Civil Service," "The Passion Play," "Agriculture in the United States, "Great Cities of the Nile," "My African Trip" and "Earthquakes of Last Year" have been assigned the members by the program committee.

Year Book Issued

The president's reception on September 21 starts the ball rolling and later on in the year will come the club's anniversary (November 11), a Christmas party, a drama day and the annual musicale, the season closing with the annual outing in June.

Mrs. M. M. Redenbaugh, Dr. Ralph H. Boots, Mrs. C. C. Taylor and Mrs. Charles S. Hutchison are the speakers listed from outside the club's membership.

Lebeau, general chairman of the year book committee; Mrs. William Fink, chairman of the editorial staff, and Mrs. J. H. Marcus, chairman of the ad committee, deserve commendation for the thoroughness with which their work has been done. A beautiful poem by Mildred Weinberg Kreimer serves as preface to the book, in which are included messages from various officials, both national and local, full reports of the year's work, interesting photographs, illustrative of the work in Palestine, and a complete directory of the chapter membership.

The Pittsburgh Drama League will have entire charge of the play-writing contest—reading of the plays, judging, awarding of the prizes and production of the plays—sponsored by Kaufmann's and based on the Boardman Robinson murals in the Kaufmann store.

Drama Contest

Five prizes of $100 each and 10 prizes of $10 each will be given for the best one-act plays based on one of the murals. Each play will be concerned with one of the pictures only, and it is stipulated that on the rise of the curtain all the characters must be in the exact position of their derivative figures and that the action of the plot must proceed from that point. Since the five winning plays will be presented by the Drama League in one program, each play is to be only 15 minutes in length. Any high school student or June graduate is eligible to enter the contest, which closes October 15.

Early suffrage days and her maiden speech were humorously recalled by Mrs. Emily Newell Blair in a delightfully informal talk before the Women's Press Club yesterday. The club gave a luncheon in Mrs. Blair's honor at the City Club, entertaining also Miss Hannah Patterson, Miss Martha Hoyt, Mrs. John M. Phillips and Mrs. Blair's daughter, Mrs. N. M. Forsythe.

It was on the platform with William Jennings Bryan that Mrs. Blair made her first speech after Mr. Bryan had quieted cat calls and other unpleasant demonstrations on the part of an audience that was made up largely of miners.

The Sheraden Woman's Club, at its annual luncheon yesterday, voted $450 into its permanent scholarship fund and made its annual scholarship award to Harry Dott for scholastic standing. The luncheon was held in Sherodd Temple and was prepared and served by the ways and means committee. Mrs. A. C. Ackenheil, retiring president, before presenting the gavel to her successor, Mrs. W. W. Briant, had many nice things to say in appreciation of the work her committees have done. Mrs. Briant spoke briefly as did Mrs. R. W. Johnson, president of the Congress of Clubs. For the program there was a novel musical sketch by Mrs. J. O. Nesbit in which she did four quick changes in costume without once stopping her songs or accompaniment. Mrs. J. Charles Wilson contributed several charming readings.

CLOUDS OF PASTEL CHIFFON FLOAT THROUGH WARM NIGHTS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, JUNE 21.—Soft chiffony frocks bloom beneath summer evening skies adding their quota of beauty to a fresco and roof restaurant scene with its soft lights, flower-filled air and soft music lilting through green clad trees. Not for many seasons have summer night frocks been so picturesque or appropriate to the season and surroundings. Soft chiffons in ethereal shades of blue and yellow, floral pinks in delicate shades, soft greens and georgettes with touches of silver, all of these appear on the evening scene in long graceful, clevery draped models that are the acme of chic and grace.

* * *

DESPITE the femininity of the mode, the tailored frock continues to attract, but it must be said that the tailored effect is tempered with charming touches and very feminine conceits. These dresses are the especial delights of the young, smart woman who finds them particularly adapted to her needs. The exceedingly smart but simple frock shown on this page was sketched recently at Longchamps and so is an eloquent demonstrator of what the well-dressed lady racegoer is wearing over here. The dress itself is of light weight black kasha—with interesting cut-out pieces on the bodice and the skirt. A shoulder yoke crossing the back and just visible at either side in front, and a little vest, are of cool green linen stitched in black. The narrow belt is of the same material. The small beret of black and green knitted wool which completes the color scheme is probably an Agnes model.

* * *

THE VERY summery evening frock is from the newest collection of Cheruit. It is of soft yellow chiffon of silver lame ribbon on the bodice and skirt. The close princess lines of the frock are smartly softened by adding cuffed and shirred panels at each side of the skirt. These reach quite to the floor at both sides and back. The ensemble is completed by matching suede gloves.

600 Pupils Take Part In Playground Fete

More than 600 pupils of the Wightman School, Solway street, Squirrel Hill, yesterday took part in a program at the dedication of the new playground opposite the school. The program was under auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association of the school, and was directed by Principal Margaret Frew, Supervisor F. J. Cartwright, and Miss Eleanor Thomas and Miss Isabell Hunter of the school faculty.

The plot, covering three acres, is said to be the largest of any grammer school in Pittsburgh. Excavated into a bowl shape, it affords an unobstructed view of activities and games from points of vantage on the rim of the field.

Members of the Parent-Teacher Association instrumental in bringing the need of a playground to the Board of Public Education are President Glenn R. McClintock, Mrs. C. A. Rehtmeyer, and Mrs. James Rosenfeld, vice presidents; Miss Grace Snider, secretary, and Mrs. Morris Balter, treasurer.

U. S. Acts to Acquire Forestry Acreage

With a desire to add to the natural forests near the headwaters of the Allegheny river, the United States government has taken legal steps toward attaining additional acreage. United States Attorney Louis E. Graham yesterday presented a petition in Federal court here asking condemnation of 16,276½ acres of land in Forest and Warren counties. The land is to be used for forestry purposes.

August 26 has been set for final hearings, when owners have an opportunity to protest. If the court orders the condemnation to proceed a board of viewers will be appointed to set a price on the acreage.

SCHOENBRUNN, founded in 1772 by Moravian missionaries and Christian Delaware Indians, was abandoned in 1777 because of frontier war activities of the Revolutionary period. Its site was lost for almost 150 years. It has recently been taken over by the State of Ohio, created a park and is being rebuilt. At the present time reconstruction of about a dozen dwellings, including the school, said to be the first west of the Alleghenies mountains, and the church which some historians say was erected 10 years before there was such an edifice in Pittsburgh, have been completed. All work has been done by hand and of native timber, hewn on the site.

Since a few days ago when we saw the members of the Etna fire company parading around downtown in their hose truck we're genuinely sorry there are no big buildings in Etna. They seemed to be asking for bigger and better fires.

On Tracy Joyce's recent visit to town we made some observations which are fairly invaluable, as our observations go. We observed that Joyce no longer held the attention of the fair sex as he did a few seasons ago although it cannot be denied—not even by us—that he is still rather popular. After watching keenly those who applauded him most vociferously we estimated that the average age of the incurable Joyce fan was 13 if not 14. These children—always girls—applauded him no matter. They do not care when he plays the fiddles, sings a song or essays a wisecrack, so long as he does something.

Startling enough, Joyce was a much better entertainer on his last visit than ever before although it is doubtful whether he will ever be more than a master of ceremonies, which is not enough.

German Offer to Buy "All Silent" Chaplin Film Elates Star

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, June 21

German theater men have offered Charles Chaplin a huge sum for a completely silent version of his new picture, "City Lights." They don't even want the synchronized musical score that Charlie is having recorded for this country.

With visible elation, Charlie told me this today as we talked for the better part of an hour in his studio bungalow. During this time Charlie drank tea and endlessly shuffled an old deck of playing cards.

From [illegible] Charlie has declined the [illegible] During the last two weeks, it seems, the report has gained [illegible] that he was [illegible] by Howard Hughes [illegible] Hughes, Algiers.

Charles Chaplin

"That isn't true," said Charlie, "but I do think that it is the best talkie yet. As for my own pictures, they will always be silent."

People in Hollywood have said that Charlie is due for stubborn to go to talking pictures. I find that he has seen many of them. Aside from newsreels and from Hell's Angels, however, they have left him cold.

The comedian will finish his picture in time for release in September. After that he's going on a long trip.

"It's been 17 years since I had a holiday, when I could completely relax," explained Charlie. "This time I'm going to do it. There's nothing hanging over me. When I get thoroughly rested, I'll come back and make more silent pictures."

JUST A SUGGESTION

Walter Weems, Mack Sennett writer, sends a suggestion to this department:

"When the wedding trip is over, Bebe and Ben may issue 'at home' cards reading 'Daniels in the Lyon's den.'"

CLARA AGAIN

The latest exploit of Clara Bow is received with amused tolerance [illegible] in the film colony.

Clara Bow

Nobody thinks it will hurt her a bit for the public to know she was willing to pay $30,000 to settle a threatened alienation of affection suit.

It isn't likely that the publicity will affect her status with Paramount. Her contract has about a year and a half to go, and her close friends believe she will be willing to sign there again rather than risk another studio where promises might not be kept.

Out here, everybody knows that Clara is in and out of love affairs with marvelous facility. They don't attach much importance to the red-headed star's announcement that Rex Bell is her new boy friend. Bets are up that he won't last as long as Harry Richman.

MARION DAVIES BRINGS "FLORODORA GIRL" BACK TO LIFE

By GEORGE SEIBEL

WHEN the descendants of the famous Floradora Sextet have formed a new Mayflower Society of D. A. R. perhaps Marion Davies will be remembered as the last of all the Floradora Girls. Because of the screen feature in which she revives memories of the gay nineties at the Penn Theater this week.

George Seibel

Here is a picture that has historic value. It is a revival of those days when bowlegging was the wild diversion of portly parlors and "A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" was our national anthem.

Those were the days when the motorless carriage had just burst into public notice at a speed of 12 miles an hour, at which the horse in this picture whinnies in disgust.

PAST LIVES AGAIN

In this picture the past lives again. There is little that was that has not been put into it. We see a "bicycle built for two," we see an old-style saloon where you carry home a "bucket of suds," we see the militant and bathing suits of our grandmothers and Marion Davies even shows how nicely they pulled their skirts down over their ankles.

And the great scene of emotional crisis is acted to the heart-rending strains of that pathetic chef-d'oeuvre, "After the Ball."

There are some splendid moments of comedy as when the swing breaks and the hero and heroine sit down on top of a picnic dinner. And the last scene of all in which the hero woos her on the Casino stage while she is singing with the orchestra and she answers in tune with the song, is really an original and well-staged climax.

MISS DAVIES AND THEN SOME

Miss Davies with her charm and comedy spirit is the chief ingredient of "The Florodora Girl" but she is not all of it. So much variety of movement has been put into the picture, so many angles of life in the nineties are shown, that it becomes a historical document as well as capital entertainment.

Then there are the "Greater Pittsburgh Follies" the stage show made up of local talent—oodles of it. If Wesley Eddy and the management weren't so honest, admitting that this is Pittsburgh on parade, it might never be suspected. There is an adagio dancer, Betty Nylander, who can travel in the fastest company while Edward Stanisloff's Russian dance with the entire Russian production would make Baliieff take off his hat.

Frank McMillan, the Buck Sisters, the Magedson Twins, Dot Wensel and Vic Griffin, Sally Saraff, the Three Queens, Violet Schafer, Tommy Nolan, Beulah Yorkin, Bernard Siral, Cliff Comoroda and all the rest of the ensemble are as smooth as any professional.

It's a great show, with Joe Hiller, Wild Oscar and David Pesetzki all doing their bit to make it great.

Absolution

I do not think that we will meet again,
And doubtless you are rather glad of that;
I realize it's rather hard to feign
A cordial greeting—once romance goes flat.

Well, bit by bit your memory will fade,
For I will learn that scars are quick to heal,
And doubtless I will find some eager maid
To stack the cards of fate and gayly deal.

Yet this is true—that for a certain space
You made my nights alive with ecstasy;
I know that in your beauty-haunted face

I found the dreams I thought could never be.
—Don Wahn.

So surely, dear, it isn't hard to guess—
That I have little room for bitterness!

Gag

Guy Lombardo, the popular baton wielder who is playing at the Pavilion Royal on Long Island, tells the story of the time that John Philip Sousa ran across an Irishman playing his "Washington Post March" at a dirge-like pace, which set Sousa's teeth on edge. Snatching the cornet away from him, Sousa exclaimed angrily:

"My heavens, man, why don't you play it with a little energy? There's nobody dead around here!"

The Irishman stood by, eyes wide open with wonder as Sousa dashed through the number of the march at a rattling pace.

"And who are you, anyhow?" he exclaimed.

"I'm Sousa," said the bandmaster, "I composed that march. Don't mind my giving you a friendly hint, do you?"

The next day the Irishman appeared with an enormous placard around his neck, reading:

"A Pupil of Sousa."

Oop!

Bud Fisher: It appears, recently, chirped that comic strip artists do not make good husbands, and Don ("Strange Bedfellows") Herold rises to remark: "And God knows they do not make good comic strips!"

The Squelch Swelegant

Paul Gregory, who had a mess of "If" when he was seen here in Ziegfeld's "Whoopee," is also the leading male love interest in the publicity version of that diversion. In Hollywood, they report, while waiting for the filming to start he went a little girl-mad.

"I'm out here to go crazy about the blondes," he told Eddie Cantor.

"Yeah?" snapped Eddie. "What makes you think you're a gentleman?"

Constructive Criticism?

At a recent party for Amos 'n' Andy, William LeBaron, head of RKO moom pictures, called on the guests for talks, and a dramatic critic quoted an amusing ditty which he heard Joe Lewis warble. The number so delighted Mr. LeBaron he urged the critic to urge the actor to visit him. The next day Joe Lewis was signed to a chin-ema contract. The song that tickled the movie exec is reprinted in part. Mr. Lewis explains in the verse that too many songs have been written about Lindbergh, so he decided to write one about Levine:

L—is for the lungitude and letteritude,
E—is fer de eroplane which he druve uver,
V—is fer de vaves hupon de vudder,
I—is fer my uld Kentuckeh house!
N—is fer Mr. Chamberlin which he took ulong wit' him,
E—Is for Clayton, Jecksen and Duranty,
Smesh dem ull togedder dey spell Brudway,
I esk you wery confidenchelly Ain't I svitt?

Sotto Voce

Just Me: It has a good idea, but you rhyme "forget" with "step" and "soul" with "cold," which don't.

Applicants for Cigaret Girl Job: The job is an all-year-round one, in New York during the summer and in Florida winters. No selections will be made for another three weeks to permit readers throughout the country to apply.

Portrait

Harry Nelson, the Chicago railroad man, who put himself on the front page here last year when he charged that Mavis King, a night club flower peddler, had thefted $1,000 from him in a cab. She was exonerated in court, however, when witnesses testified that Nelson, while plastered, gave $900 to waiters and bus boys before he left the place. The other night he visited the club where Mavis is peddling flowers and tried to date her up. Chicago papers please copy.

Berrying Ceasar, Again?

A group were discussing one of the Stein's former peasants, who has made a "name" for himself on the Gold Coast. Finally one of his pals came to his defense with the remark:

"There's not a man or woman in Hollywood who doesn't know him!"

"Yeah," interrupted his severest critic, "that the trouble!"

Sally O'Neil and Molly O'Day come to the Harris stage today in person and also to the screen in a picture, "Sisters."

'DEVIL'S HOLIDAY' OPENS IN ENRIGHT

"The Devil's Holiday," Nancy Carroll's latest starring picture, opened yesterday in the Enright. It has Miss Carroll in a dramatic role. She is seen as a New York gold-digger who marries the son of a wheat farmer for spite. Phillips Holmes, Ned Sparks and Hobart Bosworth are in the supporting cast. The Enright bill also includes short screen entertainment.

THE BADMEN GALLOP ALL OVER SCREEN IN ALDINE

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"The Border Legion" is the new Aldine picture. It is one of those Zane Grey westerns that has movie-badmen galloping over the screen. The bullets fly thick and fast, too. And with the sound machine operating 100 per cent, it all sounds like ten nights in a shooting gallery.

Richard Arlen and Jack Holt are prominent in the cast. Both of them appear in outlaw roles. Which is all right with us, for they are such nice-looking badmen. They display haircuts of the 1930 mode, though the picture's action occurs back in the days just following the Civil War. And they wouldn't think of stealing cows or killing someone without first getting a shave.

COLLEGIATE COWBOY!

Mr. Holt, however, is an actor. He makes his role of outlaw-tonso pretty convincing. Mr. Arlen does well enough, also. But, in spite of his cowboy hat and pants, there is something all very collegiate about him when he steps up to the bar in a wild-west saloon. And you want to start humming that old sentimental ballad, "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?"

Fay Wray is the heroine. She doesn't like it a bit when a big unshaven bandit kidnaps her. But brighter moments come for her when she sees Holt and learns that the hard-boiled bandit leaders of the Old West were good-looking and gallant fellows.

GOOD SCENERY

The plot, which has some fast action, comedy and thrills, is unfolded against an impressive scenic setting.

An added attraction on the bill, in addition to the usual screen shorts, is a blow-by-blow film account of the Sharkey-Schmeling ring party. The photography is not so good and the sound recording is terrible. But it does show the uppercuts, the lowercuts and all the other things that the sport writers tell about.

MUSIC FILM BRINGS EAST AFRICA TO WARNER

By KATHERINE GODARD

Goldwyn Dawn, the film version of the musical comedy of the same name opened yesterday in the Warner. It presents a romance full of color and native dances. It boasts a cast which includes Walter Woolf, Vivienne Segal, Noah Beery and Lupino Lane.

The story setting is British East Africa where the German forces are in power and where, a year later, the tables are turned and the British soldiers gain the supremacy, hold the Germans prisoners, and bring about a happy ending.

We listened to Walter Woolf sing love songs to Vivienne Segal who played the part of the white girl who had been stolen when a child by a native woman and brought up to believe herself a native. And we watched the native dances which bear a strange resemblance to those manufactured on Broadway. And we were properly thrilled when at the crucial moment the charming girl was rescued from being made a living sacrifice to a heathen god.

Other attractions on the program are Pathe News and two Vitaphone varieties, "The Royal Pontifficate" and "Taxi Talks."

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's Question: Do you think the people of the United States have shown good sportsmanship in their treatment and criticism of Schmeling since the fight?

HONUS WAGNER, former Pirate baseball star, Carnegie: Any criticism of Schmeling is unjustified. He should be given credit for the championship at least until someone takes it away from him. He was getting his "batter's eye" in the fourth round of the fight anyway, and stood a mighty good chance of winning had the fight continued.

Honus Wagner

MISS PEARL KINGSTON, office manager, East Liberty: No one should criticize Schmeling. Sharkey should have known enough not to repeat his former mistake and should have met Schmeling in a fair fight.

Miss Kingston

JOHN HERNON, boxing promoter and local sportsman, Aspinwall: I think the people have shown good sportsmanship. I have heard no criticism and there should be none at all since Schmeling was awarded the championship. It has been done now and criticism can't change an accomplished fact.

John Hernon

LOUIS GOODMAN, general manager of sporting store, Oakland: The people of the United States should show true sportsmanship in this affair. Schmeling won the fight fairly and Sharkey has always been known as a foul fighter. He probably didn't intend to strike as he did, but since that is what happened, Schmeling should be approved as the champion. The new champion should show his sporting blood, too, however, and give an American the first crack at the title.

Louis Goodman

MISS JEANETTE Y. SIEGLE, stenographer, Squirrel Hill: What happened in the fight was not fair, but Schmeling is a fair fighter and should be given the championship without any hesitation.

Miss Sieglé

I. D. MEYERS, fight promoter, Braddock: I think the criticism made of Schmeling is all it should be. He made a statement before the fight that he would accept no fouls and when he did it made it seem that he was backing out.

Ted Kay is nursing a wounded hand and a bruised shoulder, the result of crashing through a studio door the other night. Injuries meant nothing and the program went on just the same with Ted picking bits of glass from his hand while giving announcements.

* * *

Paul Oliver best known to listeners for his touching heart songs, has been an orphan since childhood, and has no close living relatives. He is unmarried.

* * *

Walter Myers has an idea that he would like to play George Hicks, champion golfer at NBC.

* * *

Meanwhile "40 Fathom" Owen socks em 185 yards and dreams of the day that he'll make the fourth hole at Sewickley Y in less than par two.

* * *

Dick Ridgely, xylophonist at KDKA, has been offered 42 weeks with RKO.

* * *

Christy Wilbert p. a. at Warner Brothers frequently referred to by the ladies as Pittsburgh's "John Gilbert," is thoroughly sold on radio since the inauguration of Warner Revue over KQV. He has sacrificed part of his camping equipment for a portable radio to be taken on a fishing trip into Canada next week.

Bob Canfield, piano and song man of KWKH, the "Hello World, Doggone" station in Shreveport, will give us a sample of what bowls them over in Louisiana when he plays for KQV at 7:15 tonight.

NIGHT MAYOR

Attired in broad striped pajamas and leading his pet dog, "Fritz," on a leash, Jack Banky, of "Jack and Tony" fame, recently turned somnambulist at 2 a. m. and roamed Allegheny avenue until stopped by a policeman.

"What are you doing on the street in this awning?" bawled the cop.

Jack awoke, realized his embarrassment and pawned his way out of the predicament with a clever retort.

"Waiting for the red light to change to green."

And next day when he had time to think things over, Jack recalled that the incident did take place near a traffic light, one of the busiest corners on the North Side in daytime.

Mike Koval, 49, of Groveton, was arrested, prohibition agents reported, after a 75-gallon still, 18 barrels of mash and a small quantity of moonshine were found in his home yesterday.

BUTLER ROAD DETOUR OPEN

The Butler plank road, state route No. 8, which has been closed between Etna and Glenshaw for new construction, was thrown open by the state highway department yesterday, the Automobile Club of Pittsburgh announced last night. This is the only one of a half dozen detours removed in Pennsylvania this week-end that affects Western Pennsylvania motorists.

Four detours of importance to Western Pennsylvania motorists will be put on next week. On Monday morning state route No. 186 between Jefferson and Waynesburg will be obstructed by a detour 16 miles long of which one mile will be dirt in good condition. The others are:

State route No. 18, in Greenville Borough, three-tenths of a mile.

State route No. 488 from Wurtemburg to Portersville, 13.3 miles, of which 9½ miles are dirt and 3½ miles concrete.

State route No. 219 in Dubois Borough, 1.7 miles over city streets.

GAIN PREDICTED FOR STEEL INDUSTRY

Line Pipe and Fabricated Structurals Feature Steel Market Demand.

By B. E. V. LUTY.

The rate of steel ingot production this week approximated 65 per cent of capacity. The rate has been slipping more rapidly in the last couple weeks than formerly, but, as the usual seasonal low point is being closely approached and as some consuming industries are running fairly well, decreases henceforth are likely to be smaller and July may average around 60 per cent. Precedent has it that when there is an Autumn upturn it begins in August though in a very moderate way. October or November being usually the high month of the second half and an upturn is quite generally expected.

Predictions of an upturn later on are practically universal but obviously they count for little unless the size of the upturn is indicated for a mere increase from a low rate might not do much good. The usual seasonal course of steel is to reach maximum production in March, occasionally April and then to decrease to a low July. This year started with a rush and then began a long decrease the result being the very curious showing that February production this year was the highest for any February and by quite a margin with the single exception of February of last year. Apparently steel was set back only a trifle in point of time. In contrast, this month's steel production as closely as can be estimated will have been exceeded in substantial amounts by June of four previous years, and probably in small amounts by June of two other years, all since the war.

TWO STRONG LINES

It should be obvious that study of the last six months, with possible explanation, is valuable because there is no little room for suspicion that there was too much "confidence" early in the year at the very time the attitude was being preached with a claim that there was not as much as there should be. Is steel now suffering from a present lack of confidence or from a lack of judgment early in the year? If there was any need of liquidation of stocks of steel or of manufactured steel products that liquidation is surely nearly, if not quite, completed.

There are two strong lines in steel, line pipe and fabricated structural. With orders on books, reservations and projects altogether likely to come to a head, there should be full engagement of capacity in the larger sizes both this season and next, perhaps with no lull in the winter if arrangements can be made to stock pipe when it cannot be laid. With increases in capacity this activity will engage between 5 and 10 per cent of the total steel making capacity, perhaps 7 to 8 per cent, but of course much more than these percentage figures when applied to present production at about two-thirds of capacity.

COMPARISONS MADE

As to fabricated structural steel there are impressive and favorable data. As a premise it should be noted that last year and year before fabricated structural steel as reported monthly by the Department of Commerce in bookings and shipments represented directly about 8 per cent of all the steel made, while considering concrete reinforcing bars and various other items used in conjunction about 10 per cent of all the steel would be involved, whereas this year with little or no decrease in this activity, but with a substantial decrease in total steel the percentage would be higher.

There are the following strong points: Shipments by the structural fabricating shops in the first five months of this year were only 1.2 per cent under shipments in the same period of last year. Bookings of the shops during the last five months were only 5.4 per cent under the shipments, whereby the combined order book of the shops decreased only 5.4 per cent or 1.2 weeks in the course of five months. At the beginning of the year the shops had about five months of work. Finally, bookings in April and May were exactly equal to bookings in January and February, the month between being a relatively light month. Thus the pace was fully sustained, but at the same time there was no progressive increase.

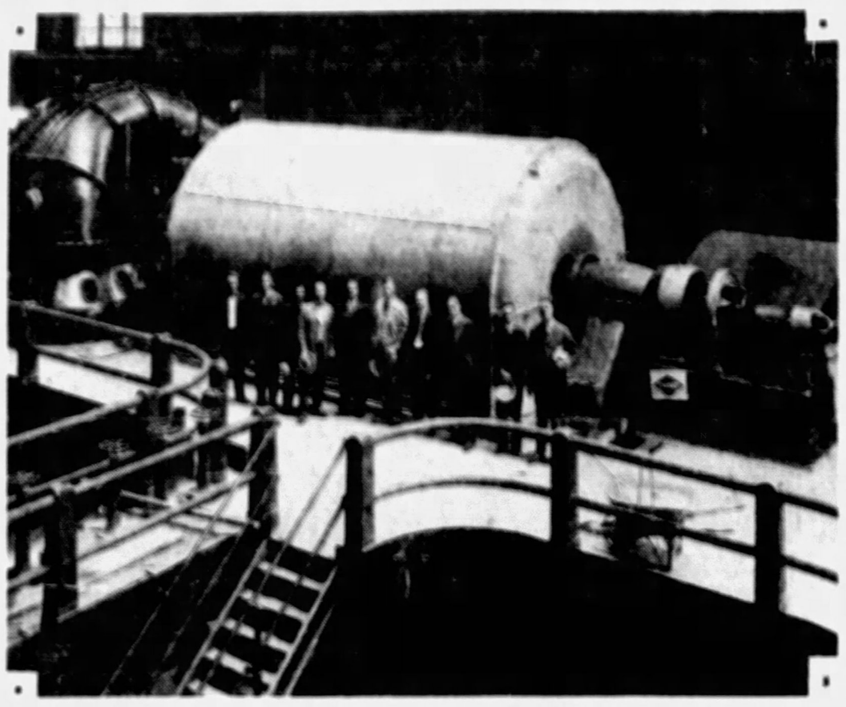
HUGE GENERATOR NOW ON TRIAL



60,000-HORSEPOWER GENERATOR UNDERGOING TRIALS IN BRUNOT'S ISLAND PLANT

SURVEY POWER STATION SITE

Promises made on October 30, 1928, at the ground-breaking exercises on Brunot Island when Senator David A. Reed dedicated the site of a new power station in honor of his father, Judge James H. Reed, and expressed his faith and the faith of the Duquesne Light Company in Pittsburgh's future, have been fulfilled with the practical completion of the first step of the James H. Reed Power Station, with an initial capacity of 80,000 horsepower.

The huge generator and the auxiliary equipment are now being tried out preparatory to placing the station in regular service, so that it will supplement the present facilities of the light company this winter.

Following group of officials of the Duquesne Light Company recently attended an inspection trip of the new power station: L. Tattersall, G. E. Balch, J. M. Froelich, T. E. Purcell, M. R. Sumner, A. G. Butler, E. C. Stone, W. G. Jens, J. J. Dougherty and E. W. Judy.

WESTERN RAIL PLAN O. K.'D

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Conditional permission was given the Great Northern and the Western Pacific Railroad companies yesterday to construct new lines in Northern California which will enable the Great Northern to extend its line into San Francisco.

Approximately $14,936,000 will be spent on the new extensions, $10,000,000 of which will be provided by the Western Pacific and the balance by the Great Northern.

The extension was bitterly opposed by the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific Railroad. But the commission ruled that public convenience and necessity justified the construction. The condition attached was a requirement that the Great Northern should permit the Western Pacific to have reasonable joint use of a part of the new construction the company will undertake.

The construction program approved will result in the Great Northern Railroad building 90 miles south from Klamath Falls, Ore., while the Western Pacific will build 110 miles north from a point on its main line in Lassen County, the two extensions to meet.

Jones New Head Of Electric Group

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21.—William A. Jones, vice president of the Cities Service Company, New York, was elected president of the National Electric Light Association at its fifty-third annual convention. The 1931 convention city will not be determined here, but it was understood Atlantic City would be the choice and the date June 8 to 12. Jones succeeds Matthew S. Sloan, New York.

Imports of Glass Drop During Week

Imports of both plate and window glass into this country, during the week ended June 14, registered declines in comparison with the preceding week's volume, according to the latest unofficial compilations. In plate glass, incoming shipments for the week totaled only 106 cases as against 113 cases and 111,550 pounds received the week of June 7. Imports of window glass for the comparative periods were 1,155 boxes and 1,708 boxes, 85,725 pounds, respectively.

Packers Unaffected By Market Slump

CHICAGO, June 21.—The packing house business in general continues on a sound basis, apparently affected very little by the stock market situation, according to F. Edson White, president of Armour and Company. Results for the first half of the fiscal year are about on a par with those for the first half of last year, he said, while prospects for the second half are better than a year ago.

American Radiator to Report Decline

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

CONTINUED DULLNESS in building activity is exerting an unfavorable effect on the sales and earnings of American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Corporation. While the depression in some classes of construction work started last year, the decline was largely confined to residential building. This hurt the business of one principal subsidiary, the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company. The loss of sales of this type was partly made up by gains in the business of the other principal subsidiary, American Radiator Company, which benefited from large installations made in industrial and office buildings. It will be recalled that construction work of this type was maintained on a fairly large scale during most of 1929.

At the present time, however, all classes of construction except road and public utility work are in smaller volume than last year. Naturally American Radiator and Standard Sanitary do not benefit from the types of construction work which are now active. Residential, industrial and commercial building all show declines from 1929 in nearly every section of the country.

Merger Completed

THE CORPORATION was formed early in 1929 to operate as a holding company and to bring about the merger of the American Radiator Company and the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company. Each of the organizations still maintains its identity and operates as a separate unit.

Consolidated net sales of the new corporation in 1929 were $161,328,344. These were only 3.3 per cent less than the combined net sales of the individual companies in 1928.

Earnings were well maintained. Net profit of $20,012,171 for 1929 was equivalent to $1.94 a share on 10,165,677 shares of common stock after deducting preferred dividends. This was only slightly less than the combined profits of the two companies in 1928 of $21,308,327. On the basis of the capitalization of the new corporation at the close of last year, this was equivalent to $2.04 a share on the common stock.

Prospects for Earnings

JUDGING FROM SALES so far this year and from the prospects for building over the balance of 1930, the present outlook is for a decline in net profits. Price reductions have taken place in several lines of both radiator and sanitary supplies. These will tend to reduce earnings. On the other hand, economies which are resulting from the consolidation will have a favorable influence.

The organization has made marked progress in increasing the number of building products which it is able to supply. In addition to heating plants and plumbing supplies, several new subsidiaries were acquired last year which have materially broadened the line. These subsidiaries are the Campbell Metal Window Corporation, maker of metal windows in combination with radiators, Thomas Maddock's Sons Company, maker of vitreous china plumbing fixtures; C. F. Church Manufacturing Company, maker of plumbing supplies and the Murray Radiator Company of New York, maker of copper radiators.

TWO BANKS JOIN IN GROVE CITY

GROVE CITY, Pa., June 21.—Consolidation of the Grove City National Bank and the Grove City State Bank has been completed. The National Bank took over the business of the State Bank. The consolidation gives Grove City two instead of three banking institutions. The Grove City National was established in 1900 and previous to the consolidation had deposits of approximately $2,200,000.

The State Bank, formed in 1918, had deposits of $300,000. Officers of the National Bank are: President, Dr. E. J. Fithian; vice president and cashier, E. B. Harshaw; assistant cashier, S. C. Barber; trust officer, J. S. Armstrong, and directors, Dr. Fithian, John McCune, Jr., Ira C. Black, C. G. Harshaw, C. H. Wilson, E. B. Harshaw and R. E. English. Officers of the State Bank were: President, H. M. Carruthers; cashier, Mont Hodge, and directors, Carruthers, C. C. Covert, Levi Deal, John Bonnett, H. D. Murray, Fred Stuver, and T. C. White.

Contempt Case Is Heard, Decision Soon

Judge Thomas J. Ford is expected to hand down an opinion next week in the contempt proceedings brought against former tax collector James F. Richardson following his failure of memory in the Wilmerding election contest between him and Tax Collector C. R. Shiring. Attorneys O. K. Eaton and John D. Meyer argued the case finally and filed briefs in Judge Ford's court yesterday.

More Than 3,500 Served With Gas

A system of trunk pipe lines with a mileage estimated at more than 40,000, now carries natural gas from producing fields to more than 3,500 cities and towns of the United States, according to G. R. Hopkins, of the petroleum economics division, Bureau of Mines, Department of Commerce.

In addition, he said, perhaps 50,000 miles of trunk line conduct petroleum from the wells to distant refining and distributing centers. And the totals for trunk lines are probably equaled by those for "gathering" lines, which transport gas or oil from individual wells to trunk lines.

GLASS DEMAND LISTLESS

Listless markets continue to confront the manufactures of all kinds of glass used in the automobile, building and other kindred industries, according to the National Glass Budget. Opinions obtained from leading sources agree that there has not been any improvement during the last week in either demand or in market conditions. The marking of time by all interests for the next month or so is likely to be practiced extensively.

The signing by President Hoover on last Tuesday of the Hawley-Smoot tariff act of 1930 particularly clarifies the tariff situation. There has not been sufficient time to even obtain a remote idea as to what effect its passage will have on the glass industry in general.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

U. S. CHROMIUM TO EXPAND ACTIVITY

New Economies Brought To Industry by Use Of Chromium Plating

Plans are under way for the expansion in the near future of United States Chromium Corporation, Pitt and Wallace streets, Wilkinsburg. The company was organized three years ago to devote its entire time and effort to hard chromium plating. Since then the firm has made great improvements in chromium plating and the growth of demand has made the formulating of plans for extension of activities necessary.

The most important field in chromium plating lies in its use for resistance to wear and chemical corrosion. The industry, however, is put to other uses such as the improving of appearances of bright parts on automobiles, plumbing fixtures and similar parts. The history of the United States Chromium Corporation includes the treatment of parts weighing from a few ounces up to 10 or 12 tons.

AIDS STEEL TRADE

Chromium plate is now being used in the steel industry on cold finishing rolls to increase the life of the rolls and improve the finish of the product. In some plants cold finishing rolls are being kept in service 400 hours as compared with a normal period of 100 hours, thus affecting a saving in the cost of refinishing the rolls periodically.

In the glass industry chromium plate is being used on molds and rolls that come in contact with molten glass. Due to the fact that chromium does not oxidize at high temperature, the temperature of the glass, which is usually about 2,000 degrees Farenheit does not affect the chromium as it does an unplated mold. The life of molds that are used to make bottles, glasses, tumblers and dishes is increased as much as 25 times.

RECLAIMS PARTS

Similar applications are made in the paper industry where the rolls on paper machines must be protected against wear and corrosion; in the brick and tile industry where dies must operate in the extremely abrasive clay; in the rubber industry where the rolls that mix and calender the rubber must be protected against wear and corrosion; and in many other industries where protection against wear or corrosion, or both, is necessary.

Another field for the application of h... chromium plates is in the reclamation of parts that have been accidentaly machined undersize, or of parts such as tools and gages that have been worn slightly undersize. In this one field alone chromium plating is affecting enormous savings by reclaiming costly parts which were previously scrapped and by eliminating the time required to replace them.

LAUNCH CREDIT CAMPAIGN

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 21.—Presenting a united front for an intensive nation-wide campaign to eliminate loose credit practices throughout the building industry, the Associated General Contractors of America, the National Builders' Supply Association and eight nationally organized trade groups of subcontractors have joined hands to launch the Allied Building Construction Industries for co-operative utilization of both selling and buying power in the enforcement of standard credit policies.

Meeting last week in Cleveland, representatives of the various groups agreed upon the necessity of intensifying and co-ordinating efforts in promoting and launching credit bureaus in every city in the nation, and ways and means to create a sound, permanent credit structure within the industry were laid.

A detailed standard program for promotion and operation of the credit bureaus is to be worked out by a committee composed of Edward J. Harding, assistant general manager of the Associated General Contractors of America; Frank Dunning, of Cleveland, representing the National Builders' Supply Association, and Edward McDonnell, of Detroit, representing the Contracting Plasters' International Association.

Oil Well Supply To Step Up Output

OIL CITY, Pa., June 21.—Oil Well Supply Company's boiler plant at Oswego, N. Y., is operating with day and night shifts and the pump assembly works at Braddock, Pa., is in receipt of sizeable orders destined to permit increased operation for some months.

Imperial works of the company here also are in receipt of numerous orders for oil field equipment, officials indicating business is improving. Local plant has recalled 50 employes to duty in the past 10 days; sizeable contracts for swivels and pumps having been recorded.

Employment Off Slightly in May

A slight seasonal recession was apparent in several units of the iron and steel industry, though the volume of employment showed no appreciable change in May over the previous month, according to the monthly survey of the United States Department of Labor for the Pittsburgh district. A falling off in production and employment was noted in the coke industry and bituminous coal mines. Electrical manufacturing industries operated most departments on a full-time basis, with normal forces employed.

2nd Man Hangs Self, Neither Identified

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 21.—Eastern Washington County's second unidentified man to end his life by hanging was found by Deputy Coroner L. M. Frye, of Monongahela, when he was summoned to the river bank near Victory Hill. The man was aged about 60. He had used a rope to hang himself from a tree.

A week earlier another man was found hanging at a mine at Hazelkirk, a few miles from Victory Hill.

TRADE REACHES LOW POINT

NEW YORK, June 21.—The opening of summer finds the volume of general business at the lowest point so far reached in the recession and productive activity, which has been holding up somewhat better than general trade, is now giving way to the usual seasonal slackness, says Business Week in its report covering the week ending today.

The slight spring stimulus to business has spent itself and activity has been declining since the middle of May. The business thermometer stands at 88.7 per cent for the week, which compares with 90.5 in the preceding week and 109.1 per cent in the corresponding week last year. Commodity prices are slipping to pre-war levels, stock under the last November lows, in a universal blue-funk about world business conditions and anxiety over effects of the new tariff.

American business is giving a pretty poor exhibition of its proverbial spunk and shrewdness. After six months of scraping along the bottom, 120 million people have swallowed all the water and bruised all the hide they care to, and are going to come up for air sometime this summer. When they come they'll make quite a splash that'll be felt the world over. The bright boys who see them coming a few winks ahead are going to plant a new crop of fortunes in this slough of despond while other folks are still nursing their tender feelings and keeping their money in their socks.

BUSINESS GAINS DURING WEEK

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Business for the week ended June 14, as measured by the volume of checks presented for payment, was more than 6 per cent greater than the preceding week, but 10 per cent lower than for the same period a year ago. The volume of building in 37 states, as shown by the value of contracts awarded, registered gains over the preceding week and the week ended June 15, 1929.

Wholesale prices for commodities, showing but slight change from a year ago, were lower than for the same period last year. The composite iron and steel price declined slightly from the first week in June and was more than 9 per cent lower than the corresponding period in 1929.

Bank loans and discounts for the week ended June 14 were slightly less than the preceding week, but were 3 per cent greater than the corresponding period of last year. Interest rates for call money were lower than both comparative periods. Time loan rates remained at the same level of the preceding week, but were lower than the same period last year.

RETAIL TRADE ACTIVITY GAINS

Department Store Sales Greatly Enlarged by Extensive Advertising

Retail trade has been slightly more active, particularly in the demand for summer merchandise, but jobbers report the demand continuing uneven, with purchases chiefly for immediate delivery, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review.

Department stores have been stimulating demand by extensive advertising and special sales so that the total volume of business has been quite large. Orders for future delivery have been rather disappointing, although sales of men's and women's clothing for immediate delivery have been somewhat better. Sales of shoes at wholesale continue rather small, and the leather market continues quiet with prices low.

Automobile sales are only fair although there has been quite an active demand for automobile accessories and equipment. Construction work continues materially below normal and the demand for lumber and other building materials is slow, with the exception of cement, the sales of which are running somewhat above normal, due largely to extensive road and bridge construction work now in progress. Sales of groceries and provisions are in moderate volume, with prices very low.

COLLECTIONS SLOW

Demand for electrical equipment continues rather slow, the main volume of orders being for the heavier equipment. Plumbing and heating supplies continue to move slowly, and prices are averaging about 16 per cent lower than a year ago. Crude oil production in Pennsylvania has shown some decrease, with demand rather slow.

Not much change is noted in the production of bituminous coal, and both demand and prices continue unsatisfactory. Western Pennsylvania grades of run-of-mine coal are quoted per net ton at mines as follows: Steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; gas coal, $1.65 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.50 to $1.75; steam slack, 90c to $1.10; gas slack, $1.00 to $1.25.

There has been little change in the collection situation, the average still being materially slower than normal.

$1,000 Jewel Robbery Revealed by Arrest

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 21.—Arrest of Rudolph Benevento by Donora police revealed the theft of silverware and jewelry valued at $1,000 from the home of Dr. D. A. Rupert several days ago, police say.

Most of the loot was reported found in Benevento's home. The rest was recovered from persons to whom it had been sold or traded.

Receivers' Bonds Fixed at $30,000

Judge Elder W. Marshall, of Common Pleas Court, has fixed the bond of L. I. MacQueen and H. M. Oliver, temporary receivers of the W. B. McLean Manufacturing Company at $30,000. The court named these two men yesterday, on a friendly action brought by the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company in the hope of helping the McLean concern straighten out its financial affairs.

Director

HOMER N. OAKLEY

HAS AMBULANCE SERVICE

Ambulance service has become an increasingly important part of the business of Homer N. Oakley, funeral director at 1501 Monterey street, North Side. For the past six years his organization has had the ambulance contract for the Presbyterian Hospital.

Homer Nelson Oakley was born in old Allegheny, now a part of the city of Pittsburgh, February 7, 1886. He attended the public schools of the city and from his study there obtained a practical grounding in the elements of education. At an early age he found it necessary to start out in the world and provide for his own maintenance.

He entered the employment of the Excelsior Express Company, but was not content to look forward to working indefinitely at any kind of routine labor. He practiced the most rigid economy and laid aside every possible dollar for the purpose of preparing himself for a higher class of work. After a few years he was able to begin special study and took a course in the Pennsylvania College of Embalming.

He was graduated in 1902. He then worked for some time as operator for various undertakers, thereby gaining valuable experience and gaining confidence in himself. He has progressed rapidly from the start and has become one of the leading men in this line in the city of Pittsburgh, his success being built up wholly by his own efforts.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Topple | Local Stocks Decline

STOCKS TOPPLE UNDER HEAVY SELLING

Radio and U. S. Steel Drop As Huge Blocks Flood Market at Start Off

NEW YORK, June 21.—(A.P.)—Share prices again gave way before heavy selling at the opening of today's market. Radio dropped 1 point and U. S. Steel 2 points, with transactions of 10,000 and 8,000 shares. American Telephone and Allied Chemical opened off 3. Westinghouse Electric 3½, American Tobacco B and Vanadium, 4 points, and Columbian Carbon, 4½. Missouri, Kansas and Texas, Pennsylvania and American and Foreign Power, however, moved up ⅛ to ½.

The speculative markets generally went into another decline in today's early trading. Stocks rapidly increased their losses during the first half hour. U. S. Steel breaking through 155 into new low ground for the year.

Further unsettlement in the wheat market, July wheat opening at 93 cents, still another new low for the season, the failure of the markets to make any sustained advance yesterday in response to the lower rediscount rate and drop in brokers' loans, and the unencouraging character of the weekly business and trade reviews encouraged aggressive bear selling.

Secretary Mellon's statement on the tariff measure, seeking to allay fears of injury to foreign trade, and pointing to the favorable aspects of the flexible provision, failed to bolster the market.

Allied Chemical quickly dropped 11 points and American Can nearly 4 to new lows for the movement. Shares losing 2 to 6 points included Radio, General Electric, Westinghouse Electric, American Telephone and Standard of New Jersey. Slight rallying tendencies appeared after the first half hour.

Foreign exchanges opened barely steady, with sterling cables at $4.85⅞, off 1-32.

SEARS ROEBUCK SALES LOWER

CHICAGO, June 21. — Sears, Roebuck & Co. sales for the four weeks ended June 18 were $31,475,143, comparing with $34,008,389 for the similar 1929 period, a decrease of 7.4 per cent.

Sales from January 2 to June 18 amounted to $172,276,013, against $178,187,493 in the 1929 period, a decrease of 3.3 per cent.

Humble to Continue Buying Texas Crude

HOUSTON, June 21.—Humble Oil and Refining Company will rescind its announced intention of withdrawing as crude oil purchaser in six Texas counties on July 1, W. S. Farrish, president, told a group of operators here.

The decision was reached on account of the failure of the announcement to bring forward another purchaser to take over these connections as the company hoped it might when it made the announcement two weeks ago. Though this will cause the company to purchase some unwanted oil, Mr. Farrish declared, it would rather reverse itself than leave these operators uncared for, for.

Rio Grande Oil Corp. To Sell Ethyl Gas

LOS ANGELES, June 21.—A contract has been signed by Rio Grande Oil Corporation with the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation for marketing of Rio Grande Ethyl gasoline in California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas. It is planned to distribute this gasoline in California beginning July 1.

Fewer U. S. Cotton Spindles Active

WASHINGTON, June 21.—According to census figures 34,207,174 cotton spinning spindles were in place in the United States on May 31, 1930, of which 28,374,434 were operated at some time during the month, compared with 28,860,382 for April, and 30,937,182 for May, 1929.

WALL STREET HEARS

That United States Steel, despite the decline in operations, will earn about $3 a share during the current quarter, against $3.44 in the last quarter, and quarterly dividend requirements of only $1.75 a share.

That there has been considerable switching from other stock in Gold Dust during the recent market decline.

That Warner Brothers second quarter earnings are running substantially below expectations.

That Canadian Pacific's earnings are running below dividend requirements.

That a decline in the output of cigarets during May foreshadows slight curtailment of earnings.

That important banking interests hesitate to support the stock market at this time, in view of the numerous unsatisfactory second quarter earnings statements that are expected to make their appearance during the next few weeks.

Big Employers, Note General Electric Plan

By B. C. FORBES

OTHER LARGE EMPLOYERS should write President Gerard Swope of General Electric, for details of that company's new plan to benefit employes laid off because of lack of work.

By a vote of at least 60 per cent of the eligible employes, any plant can adopt the plan. Briefly, each worker enrolling contributes 1 per cent of his pay, while employed, over a period of three years. The company contributes an equal amount.

Of the total fund thus created, up to 3 per cent will be available for the relief of employes or former employes in need, up to 27 per cent will be available for loans to employe members, the balance of 70 per cent will be used for unemployment payments. The fund in each works is to be managed by 16 directors, half of them employes and the other half appointed by the company.

Then there is provision to meet emergencies.

"In case of abnormal times of unemployment normal contributions by participating employes would cease and ALL employes would be called upon to contribute.

The company would itself contribute to an equal extent of that of the participating employes."

How about payments? Contributing employes laid off temporarily will receive 50 per cent of their full-time earnings, but not more than $20 per week. Such payments will not exceed ten weeks in any twelve consecutive months. Whenever an employe is receiving less than 50 per cent of his average full-time wage, he, too, will be compensated proportionately.

During emergencies, when payments exceed the normal receipts, everybody, INCLUDING THE HIGHEST OFFICERS CONNECTED WITH THE PARTICULAR WORKS, will be called upon to contribute one per cent of their earnings. Officials and other high-ups not on a particular works payroll, "shall contribute their proportion to the fund, during such emergencies."

General Electric employes are fortunate in having at their head two such men as Owen D. Young and Gerard Swope. Mr. Young has perhaps the most "advanced" ideas of any corporation head in America regarding the consideration due wage-earners. Both he and Mr. Swope had stern experience of the realities of life and work when youths and young men. They understand the workings of the wage earner's mind.

How to meet unemployment problems is the most momentous task confronting industry. Stuart Chase aptly says:

"As a certified public accountant, I have been examining corporation balance sheets for many years. Seldom do I find one without a 'surplus' account on the credit side, and frequently an appropriated surplus, variously entitled 'reserve for dividends,' 'reserve for depreciation,' 'reserve for bad debts,' 'reserve for expansion.' But a 'reserve for unemployment' I have never seen. The dividends and equities of stockholders have been protected by many ingenious devices. It is time, and more than time, that the flesh and blood which provide them receive at least equal consideration."

This first mild step taken by Young and Swope should arouse other employers to the urgent need for action. Continued inaction and indifference by industry will inevitably bring action—probably roughshod action—by the politicians.

NEW YORK STATE bankers want Francis H. Sisson, vice president of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, to be put into line for the presidency of the American Bankers Association.

No American banker does more than Frank Sisson year-in, year-out, to give the public a clearer understanding of the infinitely important part American bankers, especially those of the largest caliber, play in developing prosperity at home and abroad for the benefit of both capital and labor in this country. Our growing power abroad doesn't "just happen"; our brainy bankers, industrialists, utility leaders, etc., cause it to happen. American bankers do well to honor Sisson.

In addition to his unusual ability and his thorough grasp of public opinion, he possesses a most engaging personality, a personality which completely disarms the notion that every "Wall Street" banker must wear horns, be consumingly mercenary and have no sense whatsoever of public or social responsibility.

JUST BECAUSE STOCKS rebounded sharply one day, don't rush to the conclusion that the market cannot again suffer spells of weakness. This is no time to become rambunctious. Nor is it a time to become panicky.

REAL LEADERS FIGHT POOR CONDITIONS

Abler Manager Qualities Shown During Recession; Laggards Offer Alibi

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Opportunities exist for profiting from serving the public in business through all phases of the economic cycle.

Periods of recession put out in bold relief the superior qualities of abler business managers. Real leaders are perpetually fighting conditions, whereas the laggards seek an alibi for their shortcomings by reference to adverse general economic conditions. One offsetting advantage of these costly periods of adjustment is that they bring us closer to realities, and give business an opportunity to emerge from artificial arrangements, which can be only temporarily successful.

In terms of physical volume, business varies surprisingly little from the computed normal through periods of prosperity and depression. Carl Snyder, brilliant statistician of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, pointed out during the boom that prosperity is a champagne spree, followed by a headache. He added further that the ups and downs of business, during and after prosperity, add little to the normal output of goods.

SPUR TO AMBITIOUS

The return to reality is among other things spurring ambitious men to reappraise their own qualities and to seek to heighten their efficiency. Lee Galloway, of the Alexander Hamilton Institute, told me that in spite of recession, his company had increased sales of subscriptions to their business courses by 35 per cent this year over last. Apparently, while there was easy money around in the stock market and elsewhere, there was less urge to study.

Another classic example of the disposition to fight conditions is the campaign of C. M. Woolley, head of the American Radiator Company, to tap the vast new market for the company's products through cultivation of owners of old homes who are urged to modernize their heating equipment.

Radio broadcasting as a business has moved sharply on the upgrade this year, in the face of a declining volume of general commerce.

The decision of the sagacious bankers responsible for the policy of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York to lower the rediscount rate from 3 to 2½ per cent represents an attempt to give an added dose of tonic to the business world. The new rate is lower than any previously declared since the system was established in 1914. It can hardly be regarded as a normal rate; it is a distinctly subnormal rate.

CLEAR TRACK SIGNAL

In effect, the most authoritative financiers of the city, backed by the indorsement of the Federal Reserve Board at Washington, have in this technical manner sent out a message to business executives that it is all right to go forward. Superlatively cheap money is dangled before enterprising individuals as an incentive to become venturesome. In a sense, the whole machinery of the money market has been mobilized again to seek to offset the deflationary tendencies which have been reflected in a world-wide decline in the prices of raw materials.

Numerous economists believe that cheap money will in time prove the cure needed by business. Money on the bargain counter will not be enough, but cheap money will become effective as soon as it has been wedded to a revival of confidence.

The further decline in interest rates makes all fixed interest obligations, such as bonds and to a lesser extent preferred and even common stocks on which the dividends are secure, increasingly attractive. The latest maneuver in the money market is another gesture which paves the way for a better bond market. It foreshadows a substantial amount of new bond financing in the second half of the year.

TWO ASPECTS

Of course, there are two aspects to the 2½ per cent rate. Looking ahead, we see indications that it will add to the forces making in time for business recovery. Looking only at the immediate situation, however, we see in it an effect of the current slackness in business, which has been characterized by a drooping demand for credit for commercial purposes.

The decline in basic interest rates, coming shortly after the violent liquidation of stocks which brought many prices below last fall's panic levels, means that an increasing number of stocks will do better than pay their board. In other words, numerous high grade dividend paying stocks at prevailing prices yield substantially more than the cost of carrying stocks on borrowed funds, whereas last year before the culmination of the bull markets the cost of carrying such stocks on borrowed funds exceeded the yield by three to five times. From that technical standpoint, stocks were unattractive last year, and are more attractive now. Over long periods, such indications have proved reliable.

And yet nothing has occurred in the economic situation which makes it advisable to recall the advice to buy bonds. Prudent policy still lies in the direction of a balanced investment diet.

WATSON HELD IN FRAUD

Accused of posing as an Episcopalian minister, Raymond V. Watson, alias James Carr, today was being held for court on charges of passing two worthless checks and beating two hotel bills.

R. V. Watson

Watson waived hearing when arraigned yesterday before Alderman George J. Anderson. Information against Watson charged him with passing a worthless check for $8 at the Hotel Schenley and for $5 at Webster Hall. His activities came to the attention of the Western Pennsylvania Hotel Credit Men's Association when he jumped an $8.80 bill at the Fort Pitt Hotel. He was arrested by Ed Ferris, of that hotel, attending the Sewickley Horse Show, June 7, while a guest at the Elmhurst Inn, Sewickley, which hotel holds a $10.80 bill against him.

STOCK EXCHANGE TOPICS

Allied Chemical Shares Suffer From Easily Affected Market.

Allied Chemical has broken some 50 points in the recent decline. Because the issue is closely held it suffers from a wide and easily affected market. However, insiders are credited with having added to their long lines, and some of the most conservative investment trusts are said to have been picking up the stock as it reached steadily lower levels. Much of the selling was reported to have come through odd-lot houses and apparently represented the liquidation of small holders who sold the stock to protect margined accounts carrying other issues as well.

Industrial and financial operations of the United States are geared up for high speed production and consumption, and when there is some let-down it is bound to be severely felt. When consumption was at a fast rate, the sellers were in control of the situation. Now the buyers seem to be on top and at a moment they are holding off for lower prices. Eventually the consumers will again be compelled to come into the market for manufactured products and this will be reflected early in the stock market's action.

Railroad stocks did not share proportionately in the last big upturn in industrials, and some interests expected the carriers to hold better during selling that has been the case so far. However, the leading rails have been liquidated persistently in the past few sessions. Selling has probably emanated from outsiders who had been carrying these stocks in margined accounts, and threw them over in the hope of protecting some of the industrials which were looked upon as likely to be the first to show ability to rally again.

As pointed out occasionally in the recent past, the lower New York bank rate is fully warranted not only by conditions in the open money market, but by the strength of the bank's position as well. Member banks have long been virtually out of debt to the reserve in this district, and the regional bank's ratio of reserves to liabilities has been high, ruling around the present 85.9 per cent rate as against 81.1 per cent last year. Moreover the manner in which reserve credit, outstanding to a total slightly less than a year ago, is constituted justifies the lower rate. Today rediscounts constitute only $24,078,000 of the total of $274,569,000 reserve credit in use in this district, whereas a year member bank borrowings were $251,656,000 of the total of $284,102,000 credit then outstanding.

The bond market, that is strictly high-grade investment issues, probably made the most hearty response to the new minimum bank rate, and after all too much could not have been expected in that direction inasmuch as the investment list has been creeping slowly upward under the impetus of ease in open money market rates. Still heavy demand developed yesterday, particularly for the government issues, lifting the liberties to new high levels for the year and making for considerable strength in the shorter term Treasury loans. Gilt-edged rails and some of the underlying utilities also were well bought.

The drop in the New York bank rate to 2½ per cent basis, the lowest in the history of the Federal Reserve for this district, while it had been foreshadowed by conditions in the open market, was nevertheless followed by further adjustments in rates there. Acceptances were lowered late Thursday ⅛ of 1 per cent, bringing the 60-90-day rate to 2⅛-2 per cent basis. Yesterday time money again was easier, rates yielding about ¼ of 1 per cent to 2⅛-2¼ per cent basis for funds up to 90 days' maturity, while commercial paper also was easier at 2¼-2½ per cent for prime names against 2½-2¾ per cent Thursday. In short, money rates generally were established at about the lowest levels since 1924.

Effect of Jones' Skill. Possible Bar to Others. Pirates Taking Brace. | Sankey Wins Sub Job. Only Yanks Unblanked. Checking Robin Drive.

BOBBY MAY DISCOURAGE COMPETITION

IS IT POSSIBLE for an individual sport star to become too great for the good of his own game? That's the question that confronts you when you turn from admiring the amazing feats of Bobby Jones to wondering what effect his uncanny success, if continued, will ultimately have upon golf as a tournament sport, in this country, at least. In view of the latest championship triumph of the Georgia marvel in the British Open yesterday you can't close your eyes to the possibility that sooner or later contemporaneous tournament players may tire of tackling the seemingly hopeless contract of trying to beat Jones.

Bobby Jones.

In other words, Jones is so far superior to any other golfer of the present or past that there is a chance he may discourage competition. There isn't much incentive for even the acknowledged stars of today, to say nothing of men of lesser ability, to enter a tournament for a major title when the best that any of them can hope for is second honors and the only question is as to the score that Jones will make through his superhuman ability, or the width of the margin by which he will beat out the field.

IT MAY BE argued, on the other hand, that the unparalleled achievements of Jones may have the effect of helping the game, for not only do they attract new attention and cause an increase in golf talk everywhere, but the prominence of Bobby gives tournament entrants two marks at which to shoot—the overthrow of Jones and the winning of the tourney.

However, the chance they have either to beat Jones or to win a tournament in which he is a contestant is too slim to be very alluring. Bobby is farther ahead of his field than Willie Hoppe used to be in billiards, than Man o' War was on the race tracks in 1920, than Jay Gould was in court tennis, or than Babe Ruth is among the home-run hitters of baseball.

AFTER WEDNESDAY'S ROUND in the British open this week, English bookmakers refused to accept any bets whatever against Jones, figuring him a perfect golf machine in which the human factor for failure was almost negligible.

Little wonder if other golfers, unless Jones decides to retire after this year, as he is said to contemplate doing soon, are discouraged to the point of turning away from title tournament play after noticing the presence of Jones and asking themselves "What's the use?"

Leo Diegel.

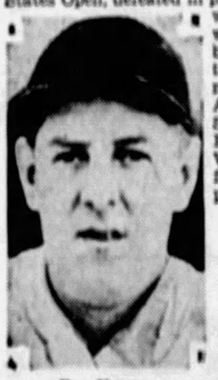
CERTAINLY THERE CAN be no hope for any of them as long as Jones stays in, unless they happen to catch Bobby on an off day, and judging from Jones' record, there is no such thing as an off day in his golf life. His career has been a succession of triumphs without a parallel in all the history of the sport. In every year since 1923 he has won one or more major titles. The one he captured yesterday is his eleventh—four United States amateurs, three United States opens, three British opens and one British amateur. He is the first American and only the second player of any country, ever to win both the British amateur and the British Open in the same year. The only other man ever to accomplish the feat was John Ball, Jr., in 1890.

JONES NOW HAS a chance to place to his credit an achievement that probably would stand as a record longer than anything else accomplished in any branch of modern sports, that of winning the British amateur and open and the United States amateur and open in one year.

But even if he does not succeed in the second half of that difficult undertaking, he already has made a record for championship victories that surpasses the greatest ever credited to any other golfer of the past or present.

HERE IS JONES' astounding record in major title competition since his first victory: 1923, won United States Open; 1924, won United States amateur and second in United States Open; 1925, won United States amateur, tied for first in United States Open, defeated in play-off; 1926, won United States Open and British Open, second in United States amateur.

In 1927, Bobby won the British Open and the United States amateur; 1928, won United States amateur and tied for first in United States Open, defeated in playoff; 1929, won United States Open; 1930, won the British amateur and British Open, with United States amateur and open yet to be played. Incidentally, Uncle Sam's victory at Holyake yesterday was made all the more decisive by the fact that two other Americans, Leo Diegel and MacDonald Smith tied for second place, and another Horton Smith, shared in fourth honors. Winning the first three places and placing four players among the first five is doing pretty well away from home.



Ray Kremer.

YESTERDAY'S PIRATE SUCCESS at the expense of the Giants marked only the third time the Bucs have beaten the McGrawites in their last 14 meetings at Forbes Field, but they did the trick as snappily as if they had been playing that sort of ball right along. As was the case on Wednesday, when a series of unlucky breaks set their good works at naught, the Rovers acted like a real ball club behind Remy Kremer's strong pitching, and if they continue to hustle and fight as they have done in the two games against New York they cannot fail to make a much better showing against the Eastern clubs this time than they made during their last stay at home.

THE RELEASE OF Infielder Stuart Clarke under option to the Fort Worth club, of the Texas League, indicates a belief among the Pirate bosses that Ben Sankey, recently recalled, is now sufficiently seasoned to step in and fill any infield emergency role when Charley Engle is not available.

Either Clarke or Sankey had to go, and for the present, at least, Sankey appears to have won the decision for retention. Clarke's release cuts the Pirates squad to 23 men and leaves two places open for new players. In all probability one other release involving a pitcher will not be long delayed.

FANS TO GET REFUND ON BOWL GO

By HARRY KECK,

Fiasco, confusion and near-rioting.

There you have a nutshell picture of the fourth attempt to put on the Tony Herrera-Eddie Elkins fight at the Meyers Bowl last night, which ended with the boxing commission ruling the bout "no contest" at the end of the third round and ordering the fans' money refunded.

Today the fans who were in on the mess were trying to figure out the many aftermath angles of as tangled a situation as has been presented in boxing circles in these parts in years.

It all happened when it was discovered, shortly after the bout got under way, that Elkins had a bad boil on his right arm just above the wrist, that had been hidden by a bandage. The bandage was knocked off in the first round, during which Herrera also sent Elkins to the floor for a count of nine with a vicious two-fisted attack culminating with a right to the jaw. In the second round the arm went up to almost twice its normal size, and the crowd began to demand that the authorities call a halt to save the New Yorker.

BOUT IS HALTED

In the third, Elkins was almost defenseless and had to move about the ring to avoid punishment. At the conclusion of this round Boxing Commissioner Havey J. Boyle consulted with Dr. Coyle, the commission physician, and then ordered the referee, Al Grayber, to ask Elkins if he could use the right arm and to inform him that if he couldn't the bout would be stopped and the ticket money refunded.

Grayber put the question to Elkins as he sat in his corner while time was taken out beyond the usual one-minute rest period. Elkins, naturally not wanting to lose his purse after the lacing he already had stood up under, said he would try to use the arm. Then came the announcement that the commission had ordered the bout called off and the money refunded to the holders of "et stubs. This announcement drew cheers, but almost immediately a complication developed when the general admission fans swarmed to the ringside and let it be known that they had no stubs, their entire tickets having been taken up at the gate. Another announcement followed to the effect that if they would remain for a short time substitute tickets would be issued to them as they filed out.

BOX OFFICE BESIEGED

Meanwhile another scene was in the making outside the bowl, where the patrons lined up and crowded and jammed around the box office. Conflicting reports here that tickets would be cashed immediately or not at all and that they would not be cashed until Monday or some later date kept the crowd there for the better part of an hour before word finally was passed out that there would be no refund, but that the stubs would be exchanged for tickets for future shows.

After order had been restored to some extent, it was stated that the main bout boxers would not be paid for their services, which is tough on both, as they have been hanging around here since last Sunday, due to postponements on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Threats of suits to obtain the purses were made and the chances are that the boxers will collect in the end, with the club standing the loss. Elkins' case is not so strong, in view of

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The cellar occupants taking two solid wallops at the leaders, the race in the National League today shows a tightening all along the line, with those pesky Cubs theratening to displace the pace-setting Robins.

The ailing Pirates brought one up from the floor yesterday, the punch landing flush on the Giants who dropped some ground in the heated flag fight. The score was 6 to 4. The two clubs are slated to wind up their series with a single game this afternoon, Play will begin at three o'clock.

BRAME, FRENCH READY

Manager Ens will use either Ervin Brame or Larry French in the finale with the Polo Grounders. The Giants will do their stuff behind Pete Donohue or Carl Hubbell.

Uncle Robbie appears to have encountered an unexpected tartar in Dan Howley. The Reds for the most part having been rolling over and jumping through for the Flatbush gang, but just when Robbie wanted to enhance his lead, the last-placers smote him with two beautiful punches, so clean they were felt all over Brooklyn.

The queerest schedule the National League has had in many many seasons will take the Pirates and Robins hurrying toward Brooklyn tonight with the idea of staging a single game tomorrow at Ebbets Field. The Brooklyn club is slated to play two games with the Reds today and they, therefore, will be called upon to do some tall hustling to reach a train that will get them home in time for the Sunday contest with the Buccos. Such a schedule should be tossed overboard in mid-ocean, but the players have no recourse other than to follow the questionable procedure. After playing Sunday's game the two clubs will hurry back to Forbes Field to resume their series.

LAND ON FITZ

The Freebooters hopped on Fred Fitzsimmons in the sixth inning of yesterday's game, their drive netting them enough runs to win the game. Joe Genewich also was a victim of the big inning. A homer by Adam Comorosky and a three-run two-sacker by his

JONES TAKES THIRD OPEN

HOYLAKE, England, June 21.—(AP.)—Bobby Jones, scoring 291 and holding a two-stroke lead over Leo Diegel and Macdonald Smith, tied for secon place, yesterday, won his third British open golf championship crown after one of the greatest battles of the golfing centuries.

Horton Smith and Fred Robson, veteran British pro., tied for fourth place with scores of 296 for the 72 holes of the championship competition. Long Jim Barnes, with 297, tied for sixth.

With the amateur title taken last month at St. Andrews, Jones has matched the feat of the famous Hoylake amateur, John Ball, who 40 years ago won the British amateur and open titles the same year.

The Georgian takes the classic trophy to the United States for its ninth visit in 10 years, and he toppled another golf record by cutting 10 strokes from the Hoylake mark of 301 which won the title for Walter Hagen here in 1924.

BRITONS LAUD BOBBY

LONDON, June 21.—(AP.)—There were no reservations in the admiration bestowed today by the British press upon Bobby Jones, victor in yesterday's British open golf tournament. Nor was there any expression of sour grapes in the golfing vineyard over his success at the expense of British players.

"The greatest of all living golfers," "the greatest golfing genius of all time," were among the ecomiums showered upon the victor today, while one writer suggested humorously that he be conceded both amateur and open championships for life and automatically presented two cups yearly.

"This would restore the competitive spirit to golf," he said.

STRIB STOPS VON PORAT

CHICAGO, June 21.—(AP.)—W. L. (Young) Stribling, the ex-schoolboy from Georgia, fighting the surprise battle of his heavyweight career, knocked out Otto Von Porat, crushing puncher from Norway, in the first round of a scheduled 10 round bout in the Chicago Stadium last night.

Von Porat, never before stretched on the floor for the count, was knocked out with a smashing left hook to his lantern jawed chin—with the same left hand that Stribling said was injured while training for the match.

The sudden knockout stunned the crowd, estimated at 21,000, a new indoor record attendance for professional boxing, almost as much as that smashing punch stunned Von Porat.

Stribling weighed 186½ pounds, and Von Porat tipped the beam at 203, giving him a weight advantage of 16½ pounds.

THE LOWDOWN ON THE BUCS

By THE BENCHWARMER.

Well, folks, it was good to see Frenchy fool McGraw's stars. You have to know Rax and the batters to appreciate how he works on everybody. When he has his stuff he's one of the toughest pitchers in the league to take, and Frenchy doesn't come up with any alibis when he's beaten.

We all hopped on Lou Jorda when he called Boots out at the plate, but nobody said anything after the game was over, because when you win, everything else is out. George had a great day out there at second.

GANG CHEERS PIE

The whole gang cheered Pie when he came through with his two-sacker with three on. Pie is playin' under a strain, with his eye still bad. I understand McGraw paid Pie a big tribute to some of the newspaper boys yesterday. McGraw has always been an admirer of Pie's; he likes him as a player and a sportsman, and, now that Pie is tryin' to keep his club in the race with a bad eye, McGraw is stronger than ever for him.

I guess I won't have to take that jump to Brooklyn tonight. The fellas is all crabbin' about the schedule for this year. I still think the railroad companies had a few paid lobbyists sittin' in when it was drafted.

JACKSON ROBS BUCS

Hughey Critz didn't have much chance to rob us yesterday, but Jackson was a larceny guy all afternoon. I hope Critz doesn't get in front of any double-play liners this afternoon, but he will if they are on his side of the diamond.

I wonder who the bird was that said a good big man is better than a good little one.

M'TIGUE WINS

SCHENECTAY, N. Y., June 21.—(AP.)—Mike McTigue, former world's light-heavyweight champion, won a judges' decision over George Neron, New York Greek, in a 10-round bout here last night. McTigue displayed some of his old-time quickness. McTigue weighed 178; Neron 192.

PARKS VICTOR IN SHANNOPIN TOURNEY

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

The real fight for the Allegheny Country Club Cup, emblematic of the championship in the Allegheny invitation tournament for women got under way this morning with a Lucky 13 in the fold after yesterday's interesting 18-hole medal play qualifying round over the Sewickley Heights layout.

Glenna Collett, national woman champion, was one stroke behind yesterday's medalist, Mrs. Edward F. Lenihan, of Cleveland, former California star, who came through to top the opening day's battle with a neat 80, and is favored to cut down her 81 score by five or six strokes to win the competition today. Due to faulty short putting, difficulty with traps on two holes, and unfamiliarity with the course, not having played it for six or seven years, Miss Collett was away off of her game on the inward stretch, although she was out in 37 with a 5 on the par 3 eighth.

MRS. HIGBIE THIRD

Mrs. H. D. Higbie, of Detroit, ran third with an 82 yesterday, and she has an excellent chance of winning if she plays well today, while Mrs. J. Bernard Rose, of Allegheny, wife of the president of the W. P. G. A., and Louise Pordyce of Youngstown, have outside chances of grabbing the honors, what with their 86 and 87, respectively, yesterday.

Others who are playing in the Cup flight today are Mrs. Curtis Sohl, of Columbus, who scored 88 yesterday; Mrs. H. D. Sterrett, of Kansas City, 89; Anjeanette Hunter, of Oakmont, former West Penn champion, and Mary K. Browne, well-known tennis and golf star, who had 90 apiece; and Mrs. Frank E. Campbell, of Stanton Heights; Mrs. F. C. Letts, of Chicago, and Emilie Roseburgh, of Oakmont, reigning West Penn champion, who had all of 91 strokes each. Fritzi Stifel, of Wheeling, scratched her name from the tournament lists at the last minute and did not play.

Today's competition is another round at 18 holes medal play. Following the completion of the event, a number of local women will go to Western New York to play in the annual invitation tournament of the Country Club of Buffalo.

In approaching and putting contest after the finish of yesterday's first round, Emilie Roseburgh, of Oakmont, won with a score of nine.

Champion Glenna Collett surprised the large gallery with her strong, straight driving in winning the driving contest with a total yardage of 672 for three swats. Her first was 237 yards, her second 200 and her third 235 yards.

SAM PARKS VICTOR

Samuel M. Parks, Jr., Highland Country Club flash, and University of Pittsburgh star who will play at Oakmont next week in the National intercollegiate golf championship, added another crown to the many laurels he has already won yesterday by defeating Fred B. Weppner, of Stanton Heights, in the final of the championship flight of the Shannopin Country Club invitation tournament. The match all even at the end of the first nine holes, and the greater portion of the last nine holes nip and tuck, Parks came through to win by a meager, but none-the-less commendable 1 up score.

In the semi-final matches of the Shannopin event, which proved to be one of the most successful tournaments of the present busy golf season, Parks set down one of the home club's real veterans, H. H. (Butch) Pearce, 3 and 2.

Jame T. Lappan, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, was chopped down in the other semi-final contest by Fred Weppner, the margin of advantage being 2 and 1.

Is keeping the eye on the ball really of great importance?

Answered by

WILLIE McFARLANE

Former national open champion and one of the world's great golfers: Bermuda Open, 1929. Bermuda Mid-Ocean, 1929.

Keeping your eye on the ball is of no little importance because we all know that if you see the ball you have more chance to hit it.

In my estimation this is one phase of the game that has been greatly abused. I have seen a great many players think of nothing else but "eye on the ball" with the result that even after the ball was hit they would try to keep looking at the spot where the ball had been.

Let me state right here that in any full swing this is fatal. No one can follow through properly and keep looking at where the ball was. My advice always has been to keep your eye on the ball all the time and when the ball has been hit look after it so that the body can turn and the club take its proper course in the finish of the swing.

BOWL PURSES HELD UP

the fact that he went into the ring hiding an injury, but Herrera certainly did nothing to merit losing his share of the receipts. He fought hard for a knockout from the start. Elkins gave his best considering his handicap.

DOCTOR MAKES STATEMENT

Dr. Coyle said at the ringside that he had examined all of the boxers on the card when they weighed in on Monday and Elkins at that time was physically fit. He did not examine him again yesterday afternoon when the main bout principals reweighed, but gave him a perfunctory examination when he arrived at the bowl last night. Elkins was not stripped for this examination, he said, and, in answer to a question as to how he felt, had replied, "Fine."

If it should develop that the club must pay the boxers in the main bout, it will be a big financial blow. The crowd was a fair-sized one, and it saw three good preliminaries in addition to the three rounds of action in the main bout. Besides paying out all of the money taken in, and possibly more, the club would have to bear the expense of the entire card of bouts, plus the expense incurred through three postponements.

How much the club and how much the commission was to blame for Elkins entering the ring in an unfit condition remains to be decided. It would have been better all around if the show had been canceled when it could not be staged Wednesday night, as at first proposed, or to have ruled the result a technical knockout when it was plain that Elkins was unable to continue. The stopping of the bout and the hanging of the "no contest" label on it will hurt Herrera's prestige around the country, since it has been customary in the past to so designate only bouts that are stopped for stalling or because of mechanical difficulties. The situation last night was not of Herrera's making, and he was giving the crowd and Elkins everything he had.

Elkins weighed 134¾ pounds and Herrera 133¼ at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

WILLIS BEATS CHIODO

Johnny Willis, tall, rangy Negro, of Erie, making his local debut, handed Johnny Chiodo, of Johnstown, an artistic boxing lacing and body beating all of the way in the eight-round semi-final and made a hit with the fans, and will be welcomed back. He scaled 124¾ pounds against 129½ for his opponent.

George Bretsch, of the North Side, 146¾, knocked out Casey Hayes, Negro, of Homestead, 148, in the fourth round of the second bout. Hayes took two counts of nine in the final round before being counted out.

Al Iovino, of Swissvale, 122½, bested Sammy Paris, of the Hill, 126¾, in the six-round opener, but the judges disagreed and the referee's vote ruled it a draw.

Al Grayber and Eddie Kennedy alternated as referees, with Joe Keally and Frank Ferris acting as judges. Tommy Grant and Max Zeugschmidt were the timers.

Crothers Wins State Trapshooting Title

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 21.—(AP.)—Shooting with perfect accuracy at targets which were often whisked in freak hops by the sharp wind which prevailed during most of the event, Steve M. Crothers, of Philadelphia, yesterday won the Pennsylvania Amateur Trapshooting Association title. In a field of 160, he was the only entrant to finish without losing a bird and his score of 200 gave him his sixth state A. T. A. title in 10 years.

Walter Beaver finished in the runner-up position with a score of 198. C. A. Brame, of New Oxford, was third with 197, and M. McBrayne, of West Chester, was fourth with 196.

DOUBLES NET PLAY NEARS FINALS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Staff Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, June 21.—Good weather at last was vogue again yesterday in the Lake Erie area and under its benign sway the Ohio State men's singles and the United States Inter-City doubles net championships passed into the semi-finals on the courts of the Cleveland Tennis and Racquet Club.

The feature tussle of the inter-city doubles was the first-round engagement involving Byron Baur and Joe Schmid, Pitt-Carnegie pair, representing Erie, with the hard-hitting New York duo, Burns and Jenkins. This tilt had been interrupted by darkness Thursday evening with the count at a set apiece and the Gothamites leading, 3-2, with Erie service broken in the third frame.

ERIE PAIR WINS

Upon resumption of hostilities, however, the Erie lads promptly cracked Jenkins' delivery to even matters. The going then seesawed with the New Yorkers erratic and Erie both steady and spectacular. The metropolitan entrants hit the ceiling completely in the fourth set, and Schmid's overhead and Baur's volleying, plus numerous well-executed lobs, quickly assured Erie the verdict, 8-6, 4-6, 7-5, 6-2.

Baur and Schmid later engaged the veteran East Cleveland delegates, Reid and Carran, and trailed, 6-4, 1-6, 6-3, 3-2 when play was halted. The Erie youths are in a tough spot with their experienced rivals thus to the fore, but Joe and Byron have never been beaten at doubles and it will be no startling upset if they rally to pull this one out.

Jack Beatty and Sullivan, Stanton Heights-P. A. R. twain bearing Pittsburgh colors, were accounted for, 9-7, 6-0, 6-3, in the inter-city quarter-finals by Walter Martin and M. P. Margesson, rangy Toronto, Ontario, slashers.

BUFFALO TEAM SCORES

Crashing into the lower semi-finals to meet Toronto was the scintillant Buffalo combination of Marsh and Castle, which accounted for the Cleveland stars, Wick and Bartel, 6-0, 6-0, 11-9.

In the upper half today, Chicago will take on the winner of the Erie-East Cleveland bout.

In the Ohio singles semi-finals, the Chicago boys, George Jennings, National Public Parks champion, and Gordon Brandt, former University of Illinois luminary, will clash in the lower sector, while Kirk Reid, redoubtable Cleveland ranking racqueter, encounters Eddie Burns, New York stylist, in the upper.

HANGARTNER TO ASSIST BOHREN

By JESS CARVER.

Ulhard (Big As They Come) Hangartner, who has been successively and successfully Pitt guard star, scout, assistant coach at Bucknell and at Jeannette High School, has been signed as first assistant grid mentor at Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y., where he'll assist Carl (Jakie) Bohren, another former Panther satellite, for the past two years head coach of athletics at Bellefonte Academy.

Hangartner, known to the boys in the back rooms and front parlors as Hank, graduated at Pitt in 1925. He was a whale of a guard, although handicapped no little by a bum knee, which, as knees go, was very, very bum.

WAS PITT SCOUT

After leaving school, via the bona fide diploma route, Hank became assistant line coach and scout for his alma mater, and then, when Carl Snavley left Bellefonte to go to Bucknell, he took the husky ex-Panther along.

Hank turned out a fine pair of lines for the Bisons in 1927 and 1928, but last year Coach Snavley decided he'd use a Bucknell graduate, and accordingly, ask for waivers on Ulhard.

Tuffy McMillan, coaching at Jeannette, grabbed his former teammate in a jiffy.

Hangartner and Bohren, or Bohren and Hangartner, should make a slick coaching combination. Both know the Pitt system from A to the final setting on his stern of the safety man. Bohren turned out fine elevens at Bellefonte, and Hangartner's defense, which he was responsible for at Bucknell, was plenty tough. The boys face a tough schedule, with New York University, Syracuse and Cornell to be met, among others of course.

The burly Hank is an insurance salesman in his spare time which extends from the end of one football season to the first broken nose of another.

Wykoff to Run In A. A. U. Meet Here

A. U. meet at Pittsburgh and the international meet in Chicago next August, but will not run against Percy Williams, Olympic champion, at Vancouver, B. C.

BASS ARRIVES TOMORROW

Benny Bass, junior-lightweight champion of the world, will arrive in Pittsburgh tomorrow morning from Philadelphia and work out here for his bout Monday night in the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, with Joey Goodman, of Cleveland. Goodman also is expected to arrive tomorrow, although he may not get here until the morning of the battle.

Manager I. D. (Apples) Meyers, of the Bowl, reports lively interest in the appearance of Bass, who jammed the Bowl for its opening show last season, when his opponent was Steve Smith.

The card will be completed for Monday's show today with the signing of an opponent for Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, in the eight-round semi-final. The preliminaries have been closed.

ROBERTS FREE AGENT

Hans Roberts, German welterweight boxer, of Brookline, has been given permission by the State Athletic Commission to negotiate for his own matches pending a final hearing in his contractual dispute with Johnny Deutsch. The contract has only three more months to run and meanwhile Hans will keep busy, following a bit of a layoff. Matchmakers may get in touch with him by calling him at Lehigh 6628-W.

BABCOCK GIVES INDORSEMENT TO TOURNEY

County Commissioner E. V. Babcock, who has earned for himself the enviable title of "Father of the County Parks," has given hearty support to the third annual Western Pennsylvania junior amateur golf tourney for the William Randolph Hearst Trophy, which is to be played at the Schenley Park municipal links Monday, July 7, under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, in its effort to encourage youthful golfers to develop their game and tournament experience.

Commissioner Babcock made the following statement relative to the junior tourney:

"I am delighted to add my indorsement of the junior golf championship tournament being sponsored by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, to be held at Schenley Park on July 7.

"I recall with pleasure meeting the winners of the first annual tournament, and was greatly impressed by the remarkable showing made by these young golfers on that occasion. Joe Curto, a local boy, won the first prize with a 68, a really remarkable accomplishment for a boy of his age, and on behalf of your enterprising publication, it was my pleasure to present him with the William Randolph Hearst Trophy.

"I am informed that last year the trophy was won by a young chap named Stevenson from Penn, Pa., a neighboring town, and while he did not match Curto's score, he turned in a 69. Curto, they tell me, subsequently played in the national public links tournament, representing Pittsburgh at Philadelphia. That boy Stevenson impressed me as a fine, manly little fellow, and I hope he rises to equal distinction in the golfing world.

"It is a source of great satisfaction to those of us who have played our best games to see these young recruits carry off the honors, and I hope to run out to Schenley and see the boys when they tee off in the coming tournament. Meanwhile, I wish you a most successful and enjoyable affair."

Isn't that just great, boys? During the tournament it may be your pleasure to meet and shake hands with one of the most important chieftains of our community if you are one of the entrants. Honorary Director John Jay Burke will be right on the job to introduce him to the players—so make sure of that opportunity by properly filling in and signing your entry blank and mailing it to the Golf Tournament Editor today.

The event is open to all amateur golfers 19 years of age and under who are not attending an institution of learning above preparatory school grades.

HARVARD CREW BOWS TO YALE

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 21.—(INS.)—Yale's great varsity crew was greeted in the rowing world today as one of the finest in history following the Eli victory late yesterday on the Thames River over Harvard. It was Yale's third straight defeat of the Crimson and the Blue's ninth victory in 10 races.

After a hopeful start by Harvard, Coach Ed Leader's shellmen steadily advanced and Yale won by more than five boat lengths.

Aided by an ebb-tide and a slight wind, the sons of Eli covered the four-mile course in 20 minutes 9 2-5 seconds, missing a record for the event by 7 2-5 seconds. The record time was made by Harvard in 1916.

Harvard showed a good shell, better than last year, but after the first half mile the Cambridge men did not have a chance to compete with the polished machine from New Haven.

The freshman and junior varsity races were won by Harvard.

PINCH HOMER BRINGS WIN

Pinch hitter Douglass' home run in the tenth inning, after two of his mates had gotten on base enabled Charleroi to defeat Johnstown in a Mid-Atlantic League game yesterday, 10 to 9. Johnstown scored twice in the first half of the inning.

At Scottdale, the Scotties and Wheeling broke even in a dual bill, Wheeling losing, 6 to 4, and then winning, 6 to 5.

Cumberland nosed out Fairmont, 6 to 5, in a 12-inning battle and at Jeannette the Jays defeated Clarksburg, 3 to 0.

Gus Suhr, first baseman of the Pirates, made a fine play on Travis Jackson, Giants' star, in the fifth inning of the game at Forbes Field yesterday. REDS DEFEAT ROBINS; CUBS, CARDS COP

Associated Press.

Recent trades among the clubs of the American League seem to have been a series of wise moves on the part of the various managers involved. Every team that acquired new material in these deals is giving an appearance of new life and the pennant race, already too close for the comfort of the leaders, bid fair to become closer.

The St. Louis Browns, whose batting average has been down so far it was almost out of sight, certainly have benefited by the acquisition of Goose Goslin. The Goose, who was doing practically nothing for Washington, has cut loose with his bat, hitting three home runs since he joined the Browns, two in the past two days. Yesterday's homer aided considerably in the Brown's 4-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

CHISOX BEAT NATS

Washington's new acquisitions didn't get much chance to hit yesterday as the Senators were locked in a pitching duel with the Chicago White Sox, but Art Shires and Heinie Manush already have started clouting. With Ted Lyons on the mound and Ben Tate providing capable catching at last, the Sox nosed out a 2 to 1 triumph.

George Wuestling, formerly of Detroit, did his best to keep the New York Yankees from losing to his former mates after he replaced Lyn Lary, who went out in the third inning with a broken thumb, but his first and second hits of the season were not enough to beat the Tiger clouting. Detroit won, 11-6.

The Philadelphia Athletics took advantage of the lapses by two of their leading rivals and made their place at the head of the American League standing somewhat safer by defeating a third, the Cleveland Indians, 6 to 0.

While the gap between first and second places in the junior circuit was widening, Brooklyn and Chicago, first and second in the National League, were drawing closer together. Brooklyn's Robins gave away a close encounter to the Cincinnati Reds, 2 to 1, while the Cubs were slugging out a 7 to 3 victory over the Boston Braves to place themselves only 1½ games behind.

BUCS BEAT GIANTS

Pittsburgh kept the New York Giants from gaining ground by staging a sixth-inning uprising that netted six runs and an 8 to 4 victory. A homer by Adam Comorosky started this scoring spree. The St. Louis Cardinals batted and bickered their way to a 7 to 5 victory over Philadelphia.

Fight Results

At Meyers Bowl, North Braddock—Tony Barrera Eddie Elkins bout called "no contest" and money ordered refunded, 6 rounds; Johnny Willis defeated Johnny Chingle, 6 rounds; Georgie Bretsch knocked out Tuney Hayes, 4 rounds; Sammy Faris and Al Devino drew (referee's decision), 6 rounds.

W. PA. TENNIS PLAY OPENS

With one of the largest entry lists in the history of the tourney on edge for the opening clashes, the forty-second annual Western Pennsylvania Tennis Championships were slated to get under way on four local courts today.

Close to 130 players will compete in the men's play, and with some 30 expected to play in the women's division, almost a record entry list will seek this year's titles.

Play today will be held on the courts at Stanton Heights, the Pitt Stadium, Edgewood Club and the College Avenue Tennis Club.

DOGS AFTER NEW LAURELS

Some of the fleetest greyhounds at the Bridgeville Kennel Club's Speedway meet tonight in a quarter-mile sprint. The event is scheduled on the program. Mabel's Paddy, a two-time winner in top-notch company, will try to add new laurels, while Lightning Flash, defeated in his last two starts, will try to regain some laurels.

Last night at New Kensington, Waukesha captured the Apollo Cup race, feature event on the program, and paid the neat price of $16.80 to do so.

Nick Altrock Says:

WASHINGTON, June 21.—This guy Shires I've been kidding about all season, belongs to our Washington club now. I am glad I don't have him for a roommate because I know he talks in his sleep. Here in Washington he will be a great antidote for the U. S. Senate. But that swelled-headed business is just a gag with Arthur the Great. He does that bragging to get publicity just like Rockefeller passes dimes to caddies and Coolidge dressed up in Indian togs. Arthur may not be the best first baseman, but he's got the biggest scrap book in the league.

MAXIE NAMES TERMS FOR GO

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP.)—Max Schmeling, first heavyweight champion ever to gain such recognition through a foul, is ready to fight Jack Sharkey all over again in September—that is, provided and perhaps.

Breaking his silence for the first time since boxing commissions, sports critics, and advisors started pointing out that he can gain public recognition as the successor to Gene Tunney only by beating the Boston sailorman on some other basis than a technicality, Schmeling yesterday announced that he would fight Sharkey under certain conditions. Only two of these stipulations were named.

The conqueror of Sharkey demanded first that he receive his immediate and outright release from Arthur Buelow, German manager whom he deposed over a year ago but whose contract with Schmeling does not expire until October 13.

Secondly he "will have no part of Graham McNamee as a radio announcer" on the grounds that the National Broadcasting Company speaker favored Sharkey in their first meeting and made many errors in describing the bout.

POLO PLAY OPENS

BALTIMORE, June 21.—(AP.)—The Maryland Polo Club Blue Team yesterday defeated the Sixth Field Artillery quartet from Fort Hoyle, 6 to 5, in the opening game of the season for the southern half of the southeastern circuit of the United States Polo Association.

roomie, Pie Traynor, were the big punches of the round.

Remy Kremer pitched like a champ as he won his second successive victory over the Men of McGraw. It's a rare pitcher who holds the present-day Giants to 10 safeties and no homers, but Frenchy turned the trick.

The enemy move to the front with two runs in the second, but the Pirates were on an even footing with the invaders when the fifth was finished. Comorosky blasted open the sixth with a homer into the rightfield stands and the fun was on.

George Grantham had a field day both at the plate and in the field. Boots weighed in with two triples and a single and he handled eight chances in a pretty manner. He looked as good as Hughey Critz as he sparkled at the keystone post.

Charlie Engle played clever ball in the shortfield role, he subbing for Dick Bartell who was ill. Charlie socked the ball with zest, but the crack fielders on the McGraw bandwagon jumped in front of his drives.

Long's Sport Comment

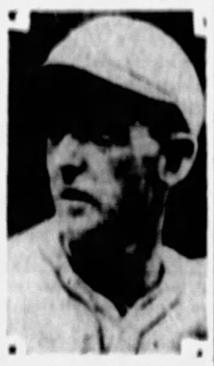
Cleveland this season. The Yankees now hold the distinction of being the only club in the major leagues yet to be shutout. The A's hurlers have held Cleveland to four runs in three games. Yesterday's defeat was the fifth straight for the Indians.

The Red Sox have been blanked oftener than any other team in the big show, having gone runless five times. The Dodgers, Reds, Cardinals and Senators have each been whitewashed three times, the Cubs, Phillies, Tigers and Athletics twice, and the Pirates, Giants, Braves and Browns once each.



Larry Benton.

WHEN LARRY BENTON, in beating Brooklyn yesterday, gave his most impressive pitching exhibition since he was traded by the Giants to the Reds last month, he completed a trick begun by Ray Kolp on Thursday which has not been accomplished by any other pair of pitchers in more than a month. For this is the first time in a stretch of 38 games that the Dodgers have been defeated twice in succession. They had not lost two games in a row since they dropped three in succession to the Cubs in Chicago on May 7, 8 and 9. That's the best record of the year for consistency and steadiness. The Dodgers are not thriving in the Western climate. The loss of two games since venturing into the West, while the Cubs were winning two from Boston, has cut the Robins' lead to a mere game and a half.

TELL IT TO SALLY

Is It Ever Wrong to Put Love Aside for Duty?

Married for 10 years

Then, for the first time, he fell in love.

(Yes, it's a true story.)

Fell in love with a girl as sweet as his own wife! For you can read between the lines that she was a sweet wife—loyal and fine and worthy of all his respect.

Yet somehow she had never stirred him as did this new inexperienced girl who worked beside him in his office.

And after well considering the question he should have had a little conference with the Muse and said: "Sorry, old dear, but I guess you've got to go. You see I've met somebody who understands me at last. Oh, I've no complaint to make against you. You've been a great partner. You've worked with me and sacrificed for me and you've been a wonderful mother to our children. I'm as grateful to a man can be. I respect you absolutely. But—it's tough luck—but I simply don't love you any more. I thought I did until Sadie came along. But now—I see I never knew what real love really was. And so I'm awfully sorry, old girl—but we've got to quit."

That's what would have happened when George met his Wonder Girl, according to all our best novelists.

Here's what actually did happen:

DID HE DO RIGHT?

It's a tremendous story, written out of the depths of a man's pain and pride and heroic struggle. You'll admire his courage. You'll be deeply touched by his agony. But will you agree with his choice?

Did this man do right to put love aside and stand by duty?

Most of us will say that he did. We will consider him a great conqueror because he triumphed over the traitor in his own heart and for the first time will have been established through the ages.

But many will say that he didn't do right. Many and they will be equally sincere—will say that he should have followed love at whatever the price.

Which would you choose were you in George's shoes? Love or duty?

"Dear Miss Martin—I have read so much in your column lately about these people who fall in love with some man or woman who is married and think they must immediately 'obey that impulse' that I want to tell you my story and see what you think of it. And I wish you'd tell me if you think I did right. I feel that I did.

"My motto has always been 'do the right thing no matter how much it hurts' and I've always tried to live up to it. And here's how things are with me and what I've done:

HER PLAINT

"I've been married for 10 years now, and I've always thought I loved my wife. But just lately a new girl came to the office where I work and when I got to know her I realized that I had never been in love in my life before. At first I didn't notice her, because she seemed such a child to me. Then, I don't know just how it was, I asked her to go to lunch with me one day and she went. I had fallen so hard for her that I'll confess I did make love to her. At first [illegible] forget when we [illegible] I felt like I had her in my arms. I almost kissed her. Miss Martin, I stopped because when I looked at her I remembered how terribly much I love her and how sweet and pure she was. I knew it would be unfair to her. And I couldn't be that.

"I thought for weeks what to do about it. I knew that if I took her out and tried hard I could make her love me, because she didn't know I was married. And you don't know what a fight I went through fighting it out with myself. But finally I won a little peace. I quit the job I had and got another one, so I wouldn't be where I'd see her. And now I'm trying hard to forget her. I know if I saw her again I'd be tempted to steal her. But I know too that I've got no right to mess up her life and my wife's life and my children's lives just because I happened to fall for her. It's my fight and I'll win it yet. And I still believe in always do the right thing, no matter how much it hurts.

"My wife doesn't know how I slipped and God willing she never will know. She doesn't deserve to be hurt just because I've made a misstep and I don't intend that either she or the girl shall be hurt—ever.

"So tell these people who think they're picked on because they can't have [illegible] with somebody else's with [illegible] I admit. But which would you rather, if you've got your self-respect. You know, even if you're miserable for awhile, that you've been square!

GEORGE."

There's George's letter. Decided on your answer? Here's mine. I'm for George a million! If more of us would follow his example—grab ourselves by the necks when we felt ourselves slipping—there'd be fewer busted hearts . . . and heads . . . in this man's world!

But the trouble is—we don't want to stop slipping. We actually like danger.

Dangerous situations thrill us . . . make us feel like great, big, bold bonos . . . or sweet little pucker-on martyrs and we really get a great bang out of romancing about our broken hearts and feeling that we're the center of some tragic plot.

So we don't make any real, honest 100 per cent effort to free ourselves from the shackles we've bound ourselves with. We just hang around and whine and whimper that life has handed us a bum deal.

That's a lot of hooey. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred we hand ourselves a bum deal. And by our vanity and our selfishness and our refusal to let go of the Buzz Saw, we keep on handing it to ourselves.

That's my answer. Now what's yours?

Correct Manners

Wedding Questions

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. My friend and I are invited to a wedding. We are not engaged. Who should pay for the present for the couple?

2. What would you suggest giving?

3. If we give one gift from the two, what signature should appear on the card enclosed?

4. How should the gift be presented to the couple?

5. Is it proper for the young man to buy the gift? M. C.

1. You should not send a gift together. It is bad taste and might create unfavorable comment. Each one sends the gift that he or she can afford.

2. It is difficult to answer the question unless you tell me how much you have assigned to the purchase of the gift. Anything for the new house of course appropriate, a piece of silver, linen, crystal, books, an enamel clock, a picture, a detail for the tea table (lemon fork, tea strainer, muffin tray, and so forth), book ends, a bud vase or a covered bonbon dish.

3. You would have to put both signatures on the card, which (I hope) that you will decide will look awkward.

4. The wedding gift should always be sent to the bride.

5. No, not for both. Why should he? A gift means a personal thought, not somebody else's thought for you.

Eating Melon With a Fork

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have heard that it is proper to eat cantaloupe with a fork. Is this correct?

2. Is it proper to eat chicken with the fingers?

READER.

1. Yes; many people use a fork to eat melons, especially honeydew melons. And, indeed, I think that is a very graceful way to eat a melon.

2. No, it is distinctly incorrect, because it is untidy for the diner and unpleasant for the beholder.

The After-Theater Supper

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am a young man of 20 years. When taking a girl to a theater, should we have something to eat after the show? If so, will you suggest something suitable to order at that time of day? Or would it be polite to take her home direct from the theater?

ARCHIE.

If your budget will permit, it is gracious to invite the young lady to "have a bite" after the theater. But this is not necessary if your budget is not ample and you have stretched it a bit to take her to the theater.

I have made a pamphlet on many suggestions as to food that is appropriate to order after the theater and if you will be kind enough to send me an addressed envelope I shall be most happy to send you one. It varies from the simplest of sandwiches to patrician dishes under glass.

Household Hints

Summer dampness has a way of creeping into matchboxes and the housekeeper can save herself many a flash of temper by whisking the matches back and forth in the bristles of a whiskbroom. The impatient smoker will be grateful for good dry matches, too.

Slipping one's doorkey into the lock doesn't hold its usual degree of pleasure when the lock is rusty. To smooth out this little difficulty dip the key in oil, then place it in the lock, locking and unlocking it several times.

What good is a dainty summer frock if hands and arms are rough and red from too many baths in soapy dishwater? Rubber gloves are an investment in beauty. Keep a pair in the kitchen, in the laundry room and in the bathroom, ready to slip on at a moment's notice.

SOUVENIRS

Drawn by NELL BRINKLEY

—THE WORLD is so full of a number of girls that I'm sure I should be as gay as a king—but I'm not. That's the very trouble—there are too many. Too many who are lovable and lovely. And so I remain a lone wolf, who ponders on his souvenirs!" So said Bill Bachelor.

If the young man can own a gallery that he wanders in when the hermit mood rides him, when all the sparkle of Broadway compounded of "stars," electric lights, tin, silver, glass and diamonds fails to lure, and the deep chair's arms, though overstuffed are ill [illegible] of a siren, if he can own a gallery of souvenirs [illegible] allery of fair faces, each image wreathed with r[illegible]brance, what has an old man? Faith—a Muse!

The young man's gallery is hung mostly with modern visions. Impudent faces, fur collars, silver slippers, long-flared skirts like inverted corn flowers, sleek heads with an outburst of curls somewhere, or, at the very most modest, a bun! In fancy he hears their voices, high and nervous and gay. He hears their conversation, and some it is of the lightest, like beaten egg; some of it is of the silliest, like calling celebrities by their first name the first time Silly-Sally meets them; some of it is very sweet, like Vermont maple sugar; some of it is very carefully assumed blue-stocking, some darting, some witty, some well-informed, some sketchy like a hurried dash with a pencil on a night club tablecloth, some school-girlish—and very few of them gentle! But "there are a few, kind sir!"

All fairy figures, the dashing, gay girl of this America in this century. Perhaps behind the other portraits is one that differs—the little girl with the black pig-tail, the nose flecked with brown freckles, the two "buck teeth" and the scornful manner, whom he thought beautiful beyond compare!

But the old man's gallery! It throngs with feminine figures, painted in fair hues—through many changes of costume—from daughters and nieces and grandaughters, back to the girl he married in her wedding gown of mouse-gray silk, past the figure who was his own grandame with her folded hair and gold earrings, to the last dim figures, smiling and bowing in pantelettes and lockets, of the little girls who played with him under the lilacs.

Madge Amazes Roderick With Her Unfeminine Outlook

Junior's matter-of-fact statement that his father would have hit Harry Underwood in the same manner as Junior had hit his cousin Roderick, if he had the same provocation, made me completely change my line of argument with him.

"Suppose you tell me about it, Junior, just as it happened," I said quietly. "Remember, I am depending on you to speak the truth. You are my honorable boy, you know."

I loved the way he straightened his shoulders and threw his head back, looking steadily at me as he did so.

"Just a minute," I said. "You know, of course, that no matter who is to blame for this both you and Roderick ought to be punished in some way for forgetting that you are gentlemen and fighting in a lady's home."

My small son's reading has been somewhat catholic, and his answer was ready.

"Yes, we ought to have gone outside, but Roderick——"

"I want you to wait here alone for a few minutes before you tell me anything," I said. "Try to remember everything just as it happened before you speak. Will you do that?"

"Yes, Mother." His tone was very subdued, totally unlike the one which had shrilled "I won't shake hands," to his grandmother, but I knew that my victory was not yet won.

"Then good-bye, dear." I stopped and kissed him. "I will be back in a few minutes."

"Good-bye." His tone was meditative, and I knew that he already had begun to go over the affair as I had asked.

I closed the door after me and went swiftly down the corridor to Dicky's room. Dicky answered my rap and gestured humorously toward the figure of Roderick sitting stiffly upright by the drop light and looking at a book which it was plain he was not reading.

"Go into Father's room for a few minutes," I whispered. "I'll call you when I'm through."

"Righto." The alacrity with which he disappeared told me how relieved he was to get away from the vicinity of his small nephew.

I would have given a good deal to have been somewhere else myself. For there was hostility in every line of the small boyish figure and in the eyes which lifted themselves to mine as I spoke his name when Dicky had left the room.

"Yes, Aunt Madge," he said with the deferential courtesy Harriet had taught him, but there was stubbornness and hidden defiance in every accent.

"I think I know what you are thinking," I said conversationally as I sat down in a chair opposite him.

He opened his eyes wide at my statement but made no answer, and I hurried on.

"You are thinking that because I am Junior's mother I am going to take his side in this. Now don't you?"

He blinked in surprise and then said slowly:

"Well! why shouldn't you? You are his mother," stressing the verb, "and you don't know me."

"Will you believe me, Roderick, if I tell you something 'on my honor'? If you want to ask Mary she will tell you that you can believe me."

"Yes, I'll believe you."

"Then I want you to know that I am not taking Junior's side in this. I haven't even heard his story yet. I am going to give you the chance to tell your story first. And if I punish both of you, I am not going to punish you for the quarrel. That you will have to settle yourselves later on. Your punishment, whatever it is, will be for fighting indoors like ruffians instead of walking to settle your argument outdoors as gentlemen do."

It was an experiment, this introducing a modified set of pugilistic ethics for the consideration of these youngsters. All my training cried out against it. But my common sense told me that Roderick and Junior were naturally antagonistic to each other and the Christmas vacation could easily be spoiled by their altercations.

Roderick eyed me with amazement. Patently no feminine edict like this had come into his life before.

"Do you mean," he said, "that you're going to let Junior and me fight this out some time?"

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Potential Husbands

A confirmed bachelor's heart is like a sponge; it can be full and yet not show it—or it can be "wrung" and spring right back into form.

* * *

No man can possibly tell a woman HOW long he is going to love her; but every woman insists on having at least a rough estimate, if only in order to check up on him, when she sees signs of a slump.

* * *

A man can manage to get accustomed to the kind of woman who bursts forth like a geyser into tears or hysterics, at regular intervals; but the woman who keeps him tip-toeing around, is the kind like a volcano, who goes along serenely for months, and then erupts suddenly and unexpectedly.

* * *

Many a woman has been amazed to discover that the husband who couldn't open a can of peas or butter his own toast at home, is known among his cronies as "the best cook in camp."

The only "reckless" loves, these days, appear to be the married ones. A seasoned bachelor knows that an ounce of caution is worth a pound of explanation and picks his words warily.

* * *

When a man glances over his shoulders, it is not because he is afraid of his own shadow, but because he is afraid of some WOMAN'S shadow.

* * *

Before marriage a man may woo a girl just in order to tell her that he loves her; but, after marriage, he hesitates to go to that extravagance and effort, unless he has something really IMPORTANT to say.

* * *

The greatest difficulty in bringing down a wild steer or a wild bachelor, is to get one of them to stand STILL long enough.

Nothing is more pathetic than to watch a big, blushing six-footer trying to "laugh off" his two-by-four wife's danger signals.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Repeated coatings of tan are not good for the complexion. They toughen it, cause the pores to enlarge, and rob it of its natural delicacy and fine texture. The best way to receive the benefits of the sun's rays is through light, white attire of open weave. To use soap and water on a skin that has been exposed to strong sunlight is to encourage freckles to pop out; they ask nothing better than that. Use cold cream or a liquid cleanser.

Marcels and water waves are getting wider and wider. New coiffures display hair perfectly straight and sleek in front and over the crown of the head but, waved sides and rear. Such arrangements shape the head trimly. Short bobs are holding their own. Hair cut short at the sides and fluttering out long at the pigtail area is taking the fancy of some of the young fry. It is time for a new excitement in hairdressing. Long time since we had one. Not since the birth of the bob.

When the human body gets more food than it needs it tucks it away in the form of fat cells. To reduce it is necessary to cut down on fat-forming chow, and to get sufficient exercise to dissipate the adipose tissue that has already collected. Avoid potatoes, cereals, butter, cream, macaroni, pork, fat meats, rich gravies and heavy pastries. Eat vegetables that grow above ground, all fruits except alligator pears, raisins, dates and figs. Broiled meats, fish and fowl are safe. Take green salads twice a day.

Exercise for reforming the fiddle-string neck: clasp the hands together at the back of the neck, high up near the hair line. Press the hands downward, at the same time lifting the chin high. This trick works double wonders. While erasing lines in the neck it batters down fat between neck and shoulders, at the back.

Horoscopes

Sunday, June 22

Sunday's horoscope is an excellent one for the launching of new projects or for all pertaining to the clergy and mystical or psychical pursuits. The activities may bend toward these ends rather than to social or domestic affairs which are not happily aspected.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a particularly active year in connection with the launching of new projects, this after the breaking up of old congestions and obstructions. Much practical work may be done on laying new foundations for substantial progress, with the aid of elderly persons and institutions. Personal affiliations may give some concern.

A child born on this day should be clever, versatile, have much brilliant initiative as well as solid and practical worth, pushing its original projects with industry and application.

Monday, June 23

Monday's astrological forecast is for a rather perplexing and baffling state of affairs, with the menace of some subtle enmities as well as open hostilities. Unless the affairs be handled with sagacity, self-restraint and precaution as to possible source of attack, open and covert, there may be losses, peculiar entanglements and personal danger.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of intrigues as well as open dangers, but with alertness as to these and wise handling of all affairs there may be unlooked for advantages, with sudden interventions of assistance. Unexpected changes and curious developments may be looked for.

A child born on this day may have a bold, courageous and adventurous disposition, but may invite trouble and enmity for itself by a tendency to rash, impetuous and turbulent conduct. It may be many sided and have a strenuous career.

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

Digestive Disturbance Often Cause of Vertigo

Vertigo is a sensation of giddiness in the head. There is a swimming sensation, the surrounding objects seeming to whirl in space. There is staggering and uncertainty of the body balance. If you once experience it, you do not forget the feeling of vertigo.

DR. COPELAND

Someone has compared the sensation with that experienced in an earthquake. Well, I never had the experience of feeling an earthquake beneath me. I cannot add my testimony to this, but I think it must be true.

Vertigo is a prominent symptom, often connected with diseases of the small brain, or "cerebellum." This is the part of the brain controlling the movements by which we maintain the erect position.

There is a disease called "Meniere's disease," an affection of the internal ear which is unpleasant and very serious. This ailment is accompanied by vertigo.

Vertigo may occur when certain muscles, which move the eyes, are paralyzed momentarily. The eyes are disturbed in their relationship to each other. Their team work is disturbed. The effect is particularly noticed in the movement associated with rotation of the head.

There are certain physical conditions that will produce vertigo. The most common cause, perhaps, is some form of indigestion or intestinal disturbance. Constipation is present in almost every case.

It is a pity that the digestive and eliminative organs are so neglected. I doubt if any other part of the body is so disregarded as the digestive tract.

The average person makes a plaything of the stomach, without the slightest hesitation there go into this patient organ the most doubtful dishes. It is given contaminated milk, shellfish from unknown sources, huge quantities of pastry before going to bed at night, bootleg liquor, and other evil things. And yet we wonder what caused our gastric disturbance!

When you have an attack of vertigo it is time to find out what is wrong. If it is due to digestive trouble, that is readily remedied. If it is due to heart or blood vessel trouble, it will be more difficult to overcome, but your doctor will help you.

Sometimes persons will take a too powerful drug through ignorance of its use. Vertigo and faintness may follow the taking of strong medicine. Never take drugs unless they have been prescribed by a doctor.

Simple giddiness may be relieved by emptying the bowels. An enema is the simplest way to accomplish this purpose.

If you have an attack of vertigo, lie down and keep quiet. When the face is flushed, support the head and shoulders with several pillows, but if the face is pale, use no pillows, and allow the head to be a trifle lower than the general level of the body.

By eating the proper foods and by sensible living you should try to get the digestive and other organs into a normal condition. You will then be unlikely to have further attacks.

Answers to Health Queries

E. L. F. Q.—How much should a woman aged 49, 5 ft. 6 in. tall, weigh?

A.—She should weigh about 151 pounds.

2.—Yes.

MRS. BURNS Q.—What causes one of my small baby's ears to protrude more than the other?

A.—This is probably a physical characteristic and may adjust itself when the child is older. If not, you might take the child to a plastic surgeon. These surgeons are very successful in operations of this kind.

Anne Forgives Eaton After He Kisses Her

CHAPTER XV.

The return journey was a nightmare to Anne. And as soon as she was home again she had to go through the torture of exhibiting a cheerful face, of talking about the trip.

"Did they treat you well?" her father wished to know.

"Of course!" she was indignant. "They were wonderful to me, as if—as if I belonged."

Murdock shook his graying head. "I didn't mean or want that," he said. "That's not sensible—to make friends out of your class. They employ you. You give them your services for a wage. Keep it at that," he warned.

"Well," flared Molly, "as if the child wasn't good enough to walk out with the Prince of Wales himself!

Anne managed to laugh. But she wanted to get away, to lock herself in her room, to think things out.

"I must resign," she told herself, as her predecessor had done. "I should."

But she couldn't. The job—and above the job the man—these were the breath of her existence, her whole intimate life.

"I mustn't let it hurt me," she warned herself. "Not too much. It mustn't spoil everything; it's too big and real."

For there was pride in loving him, now that the first shock of revelation had blunted a little. For no woman ever loved a man so entirely lovable.

Except Linda. Linda was his wife. Therefore Linda must have loved him—once. But not now, thought Anne. She couldn't, and be so cool with him. Besides, there was Jameson.

Returns to Office

She returned to the office, schooling herself to meet Eaton's needs and to encounter his friendliness—a friendliness now warmed and colored by the remembrance of their three weeks of close companionship.

It wouldn't have been so hard had not her senses betrayed her by a leaping of the pulses, by a shaken knowledge of all his presence meant to her.

During the weeks which followed she became clear with herself. She had known for a long time that Eaton attracted her; she had thought that she attracted him in return. And because she was ambitious, because she had believed in the modern—yet not so modern—code of living your own life, taking the dangers and the perils and the consequences in your stride, she had planned to use this mutual attraction, to foster it, and by it, perhaps, to gain over Eaton the one infallible hold—a hold which may not be enduring but which serves its purpose.

She had thought it would be easy because, attracted as she was, she would have no more shrinking than she would have scruples. She had imagined that Linda did not care passionately for her husband, nor Eaton for Linda. That speculation had become certainty when she had seen Jameson and Linda together.

Admits Her Love

She had argued that she would be harming no one but herself if she intrenched herself firmly, made herself necessary to Eaton's emotions as well as to his business. She had thought that she could manage him cleverly—the old, rare, Napoleonic combination of the cool mind in the warm flesh.

But it was all changed now. She loved him; she had been compelled to admit it to herself. And loving him, she knew she no longer could play the game, for there no longer was any game to play.

She told herself honestly that she had fancied that if he came to care for her, in the devastating way of men, if she played her cards rightly, it might be possible that, giving a little and withholding a great deal, she could tempt him to the solution of disrupting his marriage—for her.

But that was all over now. She loved him. And she loved him too much. She knew now that she couldn't hold out against him—or marriage. She knew that if she wouldn't be harming herself by accepting the unlegalized position, she would be harming him, exposing him to rumor, to gossip, and hurting him through his business, through his friends.

She could imagine the raw, scornful comments: "Another Big Business Man gone goofy over his steno!" "Hear Eaton is having an affair with that pretty little What's-Her-Name in his office. What a fool he is!"

Same Position as Janet's

She shuddered. She had heard such comments often enough.

She wondered frantically if she should seek another situation. She realized that she was now in the same position that Janet Andrews had been, Janet whom she had regarded with pity and contempt; Janet who had loved Eaton with all the passion of frustration.

Well, Anne thought dully, she'd been a fool—more of a fool than poor Janet. Probably she'd been in love with the man all along and in concealing it from herself she had built up this legend of wanting him to care for her in order to further her own ambitions.

Now that the legend was thin air, now that she knew the truth, she knew also that not only could she not harm him in any way, but she would not be content with what she had formerly desired he should give her. She would be devastated by anything less than real love.

The game remained only a game so long as two played at it. When one of the players was in earnest, when one of the players staked everything that mattered upon the turn of a card, it was no longer a game.

She could not set herself to win the easy, light response from Eaton upon which she had counted. She must have everything or nothing. And as it was now out of the question that she should have everything, she must take nothing in its stead. She, therefore, set herself the task of undoing all the subtle damage she had already done.

Eaton Notes Difference

She was cool with Eaton. She was remote. And Eaton at first wondered, then speculated, then grew angry. What had he done, he marveled, to change a warm, loving, ardent personality into something composed of tinted ice and flexible steel?

Their hands no longer met in fleeting contact. When she stood at his desk she stood as far away from him as possible, a withdrawal not alone of body but, he dimly felt, of spirit.

He went over their association in his mind. He lived again their comradely, happy weeks at Hot Springs; he thought of her in his arms there on the dance floor, so light, so yielding, so perilously, marvelously close. But it was a different young woman who now took his dictation serenely and coolly.

The alteration in her and his subsequent anger and astonishment brought about an inevitable tension, and then a snapping of control. They might have gone on indefinitely in that anomalous situation, waiting for the spark that would set the tinder aflame. But after weeks of slow, almost imperceptible approach on her part, this withdrawal accomplished for her what she once would have hailed with satisfaction.

"Look here," he demanded one evening, when they had been working late and were about to leave the office to have dinner together, "what's the matter with you lately, Anne?"

Kisses Her

Her heart missed a beat. It was the first time he had called her Anne. She controlled her voice and asked in return: "What do you mean?"

"You know what I mean as well as I do. Have you taken a dislike to me or something?" he asked her, laughingly.

"Of course not."

She walked toward the door of his office. But he caught her by the slender shoulder.

She tried to pull away, but he held her firmly and turned her until, still holding her, he had her face to face with him. But he was forced to bend his head to look into her eyes.

"I thought we were such good friends," he reproached her.

"Of course we are. Please let me go, Mr. Eaton."

"Why do you——" But he never finished the question. He looked at the red mouth, quivering a little. He drew nearer and kissed it, realizing as he did so what a fool he was—but he kissed her, nevertheless, carelessly, lightly, and then with a scarcely controlled savagery.

Anne wrenched herself back. She had thought she would die under that terrible pressure of his mouth on her own. She had wanted it so, and so it had come to her, as once she had planned it would. And she hated it and loved it and wished she might die where she stood.

Once it would have been enough for her, sufficient to ease—and intensify — her body's ache, and sufficient to create in him a longing for repetition and with every repetition she would have woven a cord to bind him. But now she loved him and it was not enough. It was worse than nothing. It was dreadful and degrading, because she loved it. It was unendurable because it was so sweet and so empty.!

Forgives Him

She stared at him, the back of her hand caught against her mouth. "You—you—" she murmured, and the slow tears rose to her eyes and fell.

He looked at her, fascinated by the spectacle of her slow dropping tears and the small, abased figure.

"I'm sorry," said Eaton in a shaken voice. "It was unpardonable of me. I'm sorry," he said again, almost stupidly, so wretched was he at the sight of her tears. "I—I was angry, I guess. We'd been such darned good friends, you've meant so much to me and it seemed lately that you—oh, I don't know—disliked me or something. Can you ever forgive me? Can't we go on as before and forget my idiocy?"

Now was her opportunity. One of two things she could do. She could throw herself into his arms and cry out to him that she loved him and wanted him and was his to do with as he pleased for as long as he pleased! Or she could tell him that everything was now altered between them, and she would send in an immediate resignation.

She did neither.

For his own sake as well as for the sake of her love she could not surrender to her love and to him. Neither could she leave him. So she said, very low:

"All right."

"That's—wonderful of you." He held out his hand eagerly, smiling like a boy caught in mischief and yet forgiven. "Please," he begged, "to show that you have pardoned me!"

She put her hand in his, and then said slowly: "Please never mention it again—and, if you don't mind, I'll go home now."

"But"—he was crestfallen—"but we were to have dinner."

"No, not tonight."

And before he could answer, before he could urge her to keep to their original plan as a further proof of her forgiveness, she managed a smile and slipped away to get her things.

Morgan Learns That He Will Be Paroled

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Dean Ward Kent, a successful young college graduate, gets drunk while celebrating on New Year's Eve. His automobile, going at top speed, crashed into another machine and two persons are fatally injured. Kent is charged with manslaughter and sentenced to serve seven years in the penitentiary. Duncan Morgan, a handsome chap who had been a bank clerk, is senteneed to the penitentiary for robbery. He has been in prison before and does not fear the new sentence. Kent is assigned to share a cell with Morgan and "Machine Gun Butch" Schmidt. Schmidt, a hardened criminal, is now serving life for murder. Schmidt steals a locket containing a picture of Anne Marlow from Kent's pocket. Kent is in love with Anne. Morgan gets the picture from Schmidt and is attracted to the girl. He learns her name from Kent.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VI.

Morgan was working judiciously over his task in the jute mill, wondering how his friend Butch was taking it down in the hellish dungeon, and wandering if his attorney had gotten the letter he had written him, when a guard fingered him on the shoulder. He jumped as though he had been surprised in some forbidden act.

"Your mouthpiece to see you, Morgan."

Morgan raised his eyes heavenward in relief and followed. They entered a small room divided in the middle of a three foot wall. One side was for the prisoners, the other for the visitors. Running up from the wall to the ceiling was a fine-meshed steel wire netting, and on a raised platform sat two guards who could see every move of the prisoners and their callers. Beyond the metal net, Morgan saw his attorney, Michael Moran Dunn, a ruddy-faced fellow who wore a continual smile and appeared always in the airiest of spirits.

"I've got some great news for you, Morgan," began Dunn.

"You got my letter?" asked Morgan, anxiously.

"Yes, yes, man—but this is important—"

"Important — what do you mean!"

"Now don't get angry, but listen to me—you're to be paroled—I've sprung you!"

"In time for Christmas dinner?" sarcastically.

"Now don't bite at me—you're out tomorrow."

"Tomorrow! You mean—you mean—"

"Tomorrow—the day after today—"

"If you're kiddin' me I'll break you in half when I get out."

"I'm not kidding you. It's all in the bag. I just came from the warden's office."

Sees Miss Marlow

"But how did you juggle it?"

"Oh, I got some heavy wires—some big shots outside. It sets me back plenty. Ten grand. But you can make it back on the first trick you turn—"

"Sure. I'll—"

Morgan hesitated and the look on his face caused Dunn to turn and observe a young woman who had come up beside him. Morgan turned white—the red—then he trembled.

"My God, it's her!" Morgan whispered hoarsely.

"You mean—you mean that frail you wrote me about—"

"Yes—yes—" Morgan was too agitated to talk. He stared with bulging eyeballs at the girl. She was peering anxiously at the door where the prisoners entered. She did not notice Morgan's rude glances. She did not know he was alive.

"Come on," urged Morgan. "let's get down toward the wall. I don't want her to see me. That's her all right. I'd know the face on that picture anywhere. She lives up to it and way past it. The rest o' her—"

"Say, I tried to pick up that broad on the train coming down—she's cold as a loanshark's heart."

Morgan's tone became bitter, threatening.

"Listen, lay off her. Can't you see she's on the up-an'-up? Don't try no swift line with her or—"

"Oke, Morg. Who the hell wants her? I throw a million like her over my shoulder."

Avoids Being Seen

"Now here's what you're goin' to do. I'm out tomorrow, you say. Well, you trail that girl when she leaves the train and find out where she skips. Or talk to her on the way back—tell her you know how you can spring her boy friend—a lollypop named Kent. Pull anything to find out about her. But take this along; no rough stuff you're my lawyer, not my understudy. If I can't meet her, say, it's got so I don't give a damn if I'm out or not."

"I got you. For her you'd shoot straight, change your monicker, blow the racket—"

A far-away look came into Morgan's eyes.

"It's been done," he sighed.

"Oh, yeh? And what about my ten grand for breezing you out?" The lawyer was all business.

"Don't be like that, Mike—I'll cop that first. Don't worry."

"Okay, sucker. I'll see you in my office tomorrow. So long. And without me it would've been longer."

"Long enough. So long."

Morgan turned and the guard, waiting for him, wigwagged and followed him out. He did not dare look back toward Anne Marlowe. His great fear was that she would notice him. He did not want her to see his face. She must never know he had been a jailbird.

As he passed the threshold, he met Kent coming in.

"Hello," he greeted. "Someone to see you, too?"

Kent absently looked at him and nodded. Morgan went back to his job in the jute mill; to the rhythmic spin of the big machine belt his heart sang a song.

"My old ma would be proud if she knew what her baby was thinkin'," he muttered through a smile.

Meantime Kent was talking through the screen to Anne.

"Dean, you look so pale and unhappy—are you sick?" Anne asked solicitously.

"Yes," growled Kent bitterly, "I'm sick—sick of it all. Sick of the food, of associates with beasts, of sleeping with vermin, of everything. Oh, Anne, I can't stand it! I'll go mad here. And you say the Governor can't do anything?"

"No, I saw him myself—yesterday. He was nice and polite and he said he was truly sorry for you, but that the law would have to take its course. There has been so much reckless and drunken driving—"

"I've heard all that claptrap before. He's a hell of a Governor!" snapped Kent.

Kent Desperate

"Don't talk like that, Kent," begged Anne. "I want to do everything I can for you. All your friends are helping. I didn't want to build up illusions. It would be easier for you to bear your misery if you reconcile yourself to it. Anyway, other men have lived through just what you are experiencing and they have come out to find happiness—and honor—and success—"

"Aw—you've been reading a lot of balderdash and bromides," moaned Kent. "Be practical. Do something!"

"Don't scold me, Kent. I've attempted everything I could for you. I'm not giving up hope. I'm still trying—"

"There should be some way. I hear these crooks in here telling how they beat the rap even after they were in stir—"

"Beat the rap—stir—what's that?"

"Oh, I'm beginning to talk like the rest of these morons. I mean, they managed to find some legal loophole by which to get out of prison—to cut down their sentences."

"But isn't there something you can do here—something in the way of good behavior—to cut down your own term?"

Kent was silent a moment.

"Yes," he began slowly, as though thinking out carefully just what he was saying. "There is a way here. There's a way to cut down the number of years. They say it's a wise way, I didn't want to try it—but I will!"

"I'm so glad!" enthused Anne, pressing her face against the screen.

"Yes, there's one way." Kent's whisper took on a more excited pitch. "And I'll do it. I'll show these cattle! Why should I spare them! You don't know what it's like here—day after day, hour after hour, minute after minute. Torture! To feel that you are confined here and can't get away—it's maddening. I can't stand it. I'll go crazy. Crazy, I tell you! No sensitive nature can endure it!"

The look in his eyes frightened Anne. She tried to console him.

"You poor boy—I'm sorry for you!—I'm fond of you. I'm waiting for you. Serve your time and come out to be an honorable man. You can live through it, you can live it down—"

A guard approached.

"Time's up." He turned to Anne. "I'm sorry, Miss. Visitors can't stay long today. Get goin', Kid."

"Goodby," Dean!"

"Goodby, Anne!"

Anne watched him vanish. Then she sighed.

"I am sorry for him," she mused. "And I am fond of him, and I am waiting for him . . but I couldn't—I just couldn't say 'I love you.'"

DAILY TRUE STORY

By Dorothy Dunn

Miss Baxter's heart was ready for a rebound at the time Vance Merton joined the more or less happy family at Mrs. Gregg's boarding house.

Miss Baxter would have married Mr. Thurston but for two things—he hadn't asked her, and then he married someone else.

Every male who was unmarried and came to the boarding house or to the offices where Miss Baxter worked or anywhere else, so that she could become acquainted with him was a potential husband for her. Miss Baxter was fed up with office work and single blessedness and wanted a husband.

Vance Merton was a fine looking chap rather quiet, around 30, and worked in a big private banking house.

Within a few days she had made herself as charming as possible, which was to quite a considerable extent, and was most gracious to Merton.

By the end of the week Merton had taken her out to the neighborhood picture house. He had also talked guardedly of his work while she regaled him with her moments of wistful smiles and sighful little remarks about the misery and solitude of a great city.

"Sometimes," said Miss Baxter, walking home from the picture house with Merton on the second evening he had taken her, "the Fates are kind, they throw two lonesome well-mated souls together and give them happiness for the rest of their days."

"In books," Mr. Merton remarked.

"In real life, my dear Mr. Merton, for truth can never be denied, from truth writers glean fiction, but it is never of the same thrilling quality as truth. In fiction if writers throw two dear well-mated souls together critics declare that there is too much coincidence in it. In truth, it happens right along. It might happen right in this very boarding house."

New Boarder Arrives

"I suppose so," Merton agreed.

Miss Baxter retired that night to happy thoughts. What she had said would make Vance Merton think—he would, if she could keep his thoughts steered in right channels—come to realize that he and Miss Baxter were the lonesome souls who should be mated.

It seemed to be Miss Baxter's one big chance.

He had been there only a couple of weeks but already they were good friends and calling each other by their given names. Merton mentioned Mr. Horton one time. Mr. Horton was the famously wealthy financier who had, among other interests, the private banking institution where Merton worked. Merton had been in the Horton home. He admitted that it was only on a few occasions and then as a messenger regarding matters at the bank or papers for Mr. Horton. Merton described the beauties of this Long Island palace.

"Happiness is usually sweeter and more real in some modest little cottage or neat apartment—such as you or I could afford, Vance," Miss Baxter said.

"No doubt, no doubt, but I'd take a chance of finding some happiness in the sort of a swell palace Mr. Horton owns."

"It wouldn't matter so long as there was love. Surely you understand me, Vance."

"Oh, yes, but a few millions would come in handy."

Miss Baxter sighed and bit her lip to keep back a torrent of words. How could he be so dumb?

Then Ines Carroll came to the boarding house.

Ines was a small, vivacious in a somewhat figure way and extremely pretty.

Miss Baxter didn't enthuse much on her coming. And when she learned that Miss Carroll had charge of the vast private library of the multi-millionaire, Horton, she became more downcast than ever.

Her hunch was a good one. Vance Merton and Ines Carroll became extremely friendly on short notice. They had a common bond, each working for the same famously wealthy man, although she worked in the home of Horton and Merton worked down in one of his offices.

There was a double-header every Friday at the local picture house, but this week Vance Merton did not ask Miss Baxter to go with him. He didn't go himself.

Hears Plotters

Five times Miss Baxter popped into the common living room at the boarding house on some pretext or other and on each occasion she found Ines Carroll and Vance Merton chatting there. She heard bits of the talk; she was grateful that it was not lovemaking talk. They seemed to be telling each other about their employer, Mr. Horton, and comparing notes.

Poor Miss Baxter!

Life was handing her a low-down deal. Just as soon as she almost hooks a nice chap into matrimony, along comes a chit of a girl with big, dreamy eyes and curly hair and makes the nice chap forget her entirely!

Warm weather came and the back yard of the boarding house was quite a delightful place, with its high painted fence, three shade trees, benches and tiny plot of grass bordered with pansies.

Now and then Mr. Merton and Miss Carroll were to be seen on a bench out in the yard, conversing rather animatedly.

Whenever possible Miss Baxter would go out into the yard if Merton and Miss Carroll were there. She hadn't given up hopes and her presence would prevent a lot of romantic gush being talked over.

One night it must have been nearly nine. From her open window Miss Baxter heard a low murmur of voices. She had just come in from a lonesome early show at the picture house.

Without snapping on her light, she sat by the open window in the dark of her room, anxious to hear just what they talked about.

"I don't know about that," she heard Ines say. "A knife is so messy."

"Perhaps so, but it is absolutely silent," said Vance, "and a gun makes a lot of noise."

"How about giving him poison?"

Miss Baxter almost fell out of the window when she heard this much. Her ears fairly quivered as she leaned out and clutched the sill for support.

"But, Ines, that's rather difficult."

Miss Baxter scowled. She didn't know they were calling each other by their given names.

"Oh, dear, Vance, we've got to kill him or we won't have—"

Agree on Plan

"Of course. But a stranger or a visitor or even an employe cannot go into a rich man's library and make him take poison."

"Oh, we'll kill him off all right and we will do it so that there won't be a grain of suspicion."

"Let's try and think."

Miss Baxter's eyes were wide and she was breathing heavily. She had stumbled onto something terrible—these two were planning to kill someone—some rich man. That would be the great Mr. Horton, of course, because they worked for him!

Miss Baxter saw it all. Vance Merton had come there to the boarding house first as a blind, and later Miss Carroll came. They did it deliberately for a chance to plan this fearful murder without being under suspicion—

She listened again.

"How about rigging up a silver cigaret box with a bomb?"

"If a gun makes too much noise, Vance, surely a bomb would make 10 times more."

"It would put suspicion on a servant. We could have it slipped on his library desk."

"But what chance would there be to get—"

"I have it—kill him at his office and during the excitement it will be easy to get into his wall safe back of the cabinet at his home!"

"Wonderful!"

"We'll make notes and compare them."

They got up and went into the house.

Miss Baxter sat for an hour, trying to collect her thoughts. This was terrible—she had tumbled into a nest of crime. She would prevent it—she would reveal to the world this plot to murder and rob the world-famous multi-millionaire.

A few nights later Miss Baxter came upstairs and saw the door to Miss Carroll's room wide open. She looked in. Vance Merton was in there!

Miss Carroll was at a table where she had her silent typewriter. Merton was sitting beside her, going over some papers.

Learns the Truth

Miss Baxter went down stairs and told Mrs. Gregg about it—not about the murder plot, but about Merton being in the girl's room.

"They always leave the door open—they're studying something and I guess it's all right," Mrs. Gregg told her.

"Studying!"

"That's what they said."

Miss Baxter wanted to cry out that they were studying how to commit a horrible murder, but she wasn't ready yet.

Some days later Miss Baxter overheard more talk. She did it by coming out of her room in her stocking feet, going to the open door of Miss Carroll's room and listening.

"Vance," said Miss Carroll, "you're wonderful. Your ideas were better than mine—and it means big money."

"My dear, I wouldn't have had the courage if it hadn't been for you."

Next day Miss Carroll announced that she was having a vacation because the great J. G. Horton had gone to Europe on a business trip. It was a brief trip. When Miss Baxter read in the papers that Horton had returned, she was ready to send him warning of his coming fate, especially when, at dinner that night, Vance Merton came in a little late, and as he sat down he said to Miss Carroll, "It's all fixed."

Miss Baxter went upstairs and summoned her courage. Merton was in Miss Carroll's room and the door was open, as usual.

"I've known all along about your plot to murder Mr. Horton," Miss Baxter said, "and you'll both go to the chair if you do!"

Vance and Ines stared at her.

Miss Baxter repeated things she had heard them talking about.

"I tried to see him or telephone him, but he is so well guarded I couldn't reach him—so I am warning you—"

Vance handed her a paper.

It was a letter and a contract.

The mystery play, "Beyond," written by Ines Carroll and Vance Merton, had been accepted!

"And just as soon as we are home from our honeymoon, my dear Miss Baxter," Ines said, "we are going to write a comedy based on your funny mistake!"

SILLY? EVERYBODY I TALK TO ADMITS THAT GIVING THIS CASE TO A JURY IS LIKE FEEDING RAW MEAT TO A TIGER. I'M THINKING MOSTLY ABOUT THE PRINCIPLE OF THE THING, BUT IF THOSE MOVIE PEOPLE INSIST ON SETTLING FOR FOUR OR FIVE—OR MAYBE SIX FIGURES—I'LL MEET THEM HALF WAY. ALL I WANT IS JUSTICE.

Congressman Offers Support to Working Girls

Above is the first showing of the design for the new Frisby Postage Stamp, which will be issued as soon as the Congressman can find time to take care of the necessary negotiations. Mr. Frisby explains the stamp thus—

"My idea is to show the need for sympathy toward the working classes. I therefore arranged to permit my wife to catch me in such a pose with her camera. When she showed me the film, I told her of the use to which I hoped to put the negative. This postage stamp will bring home to every family the necessity of a humane attitude toward domestic help. It will show how to keep servants contented. Personally I teach dancing to all of Mrs. Frisby's kitchen help. This keeps these friendless girls from going out at night to the public dance halls and instructs them against the lurking dangers of hasty friendships with strangers."

Unfair Coal Rates

Let Justice Be Done No Matter Who Suffers.

When the Interstate Commerce Commission's hearings on the appeal of Pittsburgh coal operators for a readjustment of freight rates are resumed in October, the southern operators, abetted by their northwestern customers, plan to show how unfortunate it will be for them if they should be required to pay for transportation at the same rate, or anything near the same rate, as their Pittsburgh competitors. They will paint a gloomy picture of what will happen to them if the Pittsburghers' just demand should be granted.

Of course, it will be unfortunate for them, just as the present situation is unfortunate for Western Pennsylvania and Ohio.

But the question is one of the fairness of the existing rates, and that can be settled without consideration of emotional appeals. Justice should be done regardless of who may be hurt.

Here is the problem in a nutshell:

If you take a railroad trip of 172 miles the fare will be 3.6 cents a mile, or $6.19, and if you take a ride of 370 miles the fare will still be at the rate of 3.6 cents a mile, or $13.32.

But this principle of passenger transportation does not apply to freight transportation. If you ship a ton of coal from the Pittsburgh district to the Great Lakes the freight charge for the 172-mile haul will be $1.46; but if you ship a ton of coal from the Kanawha (West Virginia) field to the lakes, the charge for the 370-mile haul will be $1.81—just 35 cents more than the rate from Pittsburgh. For his additional 198 miles of transportation the southern shipper has to pay only 35 cents, or less than one-fourth of what his northern competitor has to pay for a shorter haul. To the unprejudiced layman that seems ridiculously unfair.

With lower wages, lower taxes, and often with less slate to contend with, the southern operators are already favored with advantages that make it difficult for Pittsburgh operators to compete with them. Fair play demands that the spread between the southern rate to the lakes and the Pittsburgh rate be greater than 35 cents.

Politics and Crime

A Chance to Investigate a Possible Connection.

The case of Constable John Schneider, of the First Ward, accused of helping a man suspected of robbery to escape from the police, and also charged with other crimes, is of extraordinary interest because of its political angles.

Much has been heard about connections of one sort or another said to exist between corrupt politicians and the underworld, and also about the unscrupulous and even criminal methods used by Pittsburgh's gang politicians in their factional fights.

The Schneider case presents an opportunity to inquire into some of these things.

Schneider, until recently Republican chairman of the First Ward, opposed Mayor Charles H. Kline in a factional fight, and, as a result, was superseded in the chairmanship by Superintendent of Police Peter P. Walsh. Schneider accuses his political foes of "framing" him—that is, of conspiring by false charges to get him into trouble.

The whole business demands a thorough airing. It is gratifying to note that District Attorney Andrew T. Park has set about the investigation with a vigor that promises interesting revelations.

Naval Treaty Not What Administration Promised

Upon the question of the London naval treaty even its supporters on the Committee of Foreign Relations are a house divided against itself.

A majority of the committee will vote the treaty into the Senate next week.

But this majority is unable to agree upon the reasons they should give for favoring ratification.

Therefore, the treaty will reach the Senate without the customary majority report in its favor.

But there is no disagreement among the members of the committee who oppose the treaty for their reasons for their opposition. They will give them in a minority report.

These reasons are based upon the evidence taken by the Committees on Foreign Relations and Naval Affairs in the hearings held upon the treaty.

This evidence proves that the London naval treaty is not the treaty which the administration promised the American people it would get at London.

It is not a treaty of real limitation.

It is not a treaty that will reduce the cost of naval armament for the United States.

It is not a treaty that will equate the American Navy with the British Navy.

It is not a treaty that will apply the 5-3 ratio of the Washington conference to the American and Japanese navies.

It is not the treaty which President Coolidge offered Great Britain and Japan at the Geneva conference.

IT IS A TREATY WHICH ABANDONS THE 5-5-3 RATIO AGREED TO AT THE WASHINGTON CONFERENCE, AND SURRENDERS THE PRINCIPLES OF LIMITATION INSISTD UPON BY PRESIDENT COOLIDGE AT THE GENEVA CONFERENCE AS ESSENTIAL TO THE SECURITY OF THE UNITED STATES.

IT IS A TREATY WHICH HAS BEEN WELL NAMED "THE PACT AT ANY PRICE," BECAUSE OF ITS TERMS GREAT BRITAIN AND JAPAN WOULD BUILD THE SHIPS THEY PREFER WHILE THE UNITED STATES WOULD BUILD ONLY THE SHIPS GREAT BRITAIN AND JAPAN PERMIT.

Under the circumstances it is not surprising that a majority of the Committee on Foreign Relations are a house divided against itself by the London naval treaty.

What is surprising is that a committee WHICH HAS BEEN DENIED THE CORRESPONDENCE ESSENTIAL TO A THOROUGH EXAMINATION OF THE TREATY should be willing to report it to the Senate until that correspondence was supplied.

A Senate which has not the courage and sense of patriotic duty to maintain its constitutional rights need not be surprised if its rights are invaded and its powers restricted.

Furthermore a Senate which has no self respect can hardly hope to retain the respect of the citizenship.

"Singing In the Rain" -:- Drawn by Nelson Harding

The elephant has struck his stride,
And with umbrella cast aside,
He tramps, contented in the rain,
And sings a popular refrain:

"The rain of Morrow votes came down
In quantity enough to drown
The fear of drought predicted by
The arid and the ultra-dry."

"Bugs" Baer Says:

One-Sided Static

What happened to Senator Jim Reed's speech over the black and blue network?

It was a remarkable outburst of oratorical chinworks. The Senator had reached that point in frenzied patriotism where he had lighted his pipe on the aurora borealis, had both feet astraddle the Panama Canal and was just knocking a verbal divot off the glorious Rocky Mountains.

"Bugs" Baer

He was reaching for a handful of exclamation points to throw at the boodlebund when somebody turned on the buzzer.

It was an SOS call and it blanketed the Senator like a squaw wraps up an Eskimo papoose.

For anybody outside our legal corridors to advertise a wreck is to usurp a senatorial privilege.

The good Senator resumed his baccalaureate mumbles. But the SOS continued to crack East and West with all the fervor of a broken piston rod.

There is no cloture for static. In about three minutes there was a wreck on both ends of the microphone.

Even Jim realized he couldn't talk against a powerhouse.

The SOS warble jammed the air at an unfortunate period. Jim had actually something to say this time.

It lowbridged him just when he was at his favorite occupation of sewing a button on the vested interests.

There was no excuse for Jim to look at his notes for the SOS call crackled and sparked until James sent his cuffs to the laundry.

And even a Senator must cancel his speech when a worse catastrophe occurs.

And here's where the raisins walk out of the rice pudding.

There was an SOS call all right. And it smothered Reed's speech. But investigation proved there was no more reason for the SOS than there was for the speech.

Jim's enemies had simply steamed up a fake signal of distress and poured it all over the works.

Now, Senator Reed is fit to be tied. He is out for revenge and hopes to be the master of ceremonies at some prominent funerals.

We don't blame him. Static, SOS and boilerworks are no orchestral accompaniment for a dignified delegate during the children's insomnia hour.

If the Senator wants to get away unmolested the next time we advise him to sneak in between Amos and Andy.

AVIATION PROGRESS

By Archibald Henderson

The enormous growth of aviation in the United States in very recent years is one of the most extraordinary developments in the history of transportation. Aviation has rapidly passed from a sport to a profession; from a profession to an industry; it is destined to become one of the most important industries of modern times, both in peace and war.

The development of war planes is rapidly tending to demonstrate the obsoleteness of battleships as effective modes of national offense and defense. Bombs dropped from a few planes, of comparatively small cost are sufficient to sink a mighty battleship costing $35,000,000.

According to a statement issued by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, the total amount invested in planes, equipment, accessories and experimentation amounted to about $75,000,000 for 1928. The figures for 1929 ran well over $100,000,000. In April, 1929, according to Goldstrom, it was estimated that flying over the then 57,516 miles of American airways was at the rate of 70,000,000 miles per year, or a daily rate greater than the equatorial distance around the world.

At that time, more than a year ago, William P. MacCracken, Assistant Secretary of Commerce in charge of the aviation branch of the department, said:

One of the reasons for the tremendous increase in commercial flying in the United States is the vast extension of aids to airway navigation. Three years ago we had 2,000 miles of lighted airways. The lights, for the most part, were 25 miles apart. There was one air mail trip in each direction scheduled over this airway daily. There was little night flying.

Today (April, 1929) we have nearly 10,000 miles of lighted airways. Lighting equipment is standard, and placed at 10-mile intervals. In addition to the revolving beacons we have course lights, which not only point up and down the course, but flash, in Morse code, the number of the beacon.

Three years ago only mail was carried at night. Today we are also carrying passengers and express by night. With the completing of lighting on our major airways and radio beacon and radio communication services, I believe night flying on regular schedules will be just as common as daytime operation.

Every effort is being made to establish safety in flight, and to make air transportation popular. The large transport planes, with a top speed of 150 miles per hour, are equipped with many modern conveniences—washrooms, electric grills, refrigerators, easy chairs, berths, radios and heated and soundproof cabins. It is estimated that the flying activities of the nation increased more than tenfold in a single year!

It is estimated that the American total for all classes of passenger flying now greatly exceeds that of any other nation. The United States, according to figures compiled last year, continued to lead all nations in air mail transportation. As John Goldstrom says in "A Narrative History of Aviation:"

Trans-continental and intercontinental airways already in operation, and others definitely projected, make it certain that before the end of aviation's third decade, passengers, mail and freight will be transported over an international network of airways crossing every continent and every ocean, four or five times faster than the speediest express trains and ocean liners.

The magic carpet has become a common carrier.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Hate the stupid, colorless monotony of your life? Feel all choked up with glorious aspirations? Long to express yourself in some dramatic way? Sure that if you could have your chance you'd "show them?"

And while you're waiting for that chance to come along, what are you doing? Sitting around dreaming? Fooling a little with writing or music or art, or maybe an invention? Piling up bills for someone else to pay—and, of course, despising the tiresome drudges who earn the money to pay those bills? Watching them sweat, do you say to yourself: "Let 'em grind. That's all they are good for. But I—I'm different. I could do wonderful things if I only had a chance. They can't possibly understand how I feel. And it's outrageous to expect me to work at some common job like an ordinary person. A common job would simply wreck me. But if I only could express what I feel!"

Is that what you're saying, partner? Probably—for it's a very popular monologue in this twentieth century. But, if you are, stop kidding yourself, for that line of conversation will never get you anywhere.

In the first place, you're probably overestimating the importance of your inward spasms, stranger. You have concluded that they are a proof of smothered genius. And maybe they're just your carburetor rubbing against your disposition. Whatever they are, of this you may be sure, THEY'RE NOT UNIQUE. These secret yearnings and yowlings are common to all humanity, regardless of age, sex, race or conditions. Waiters have 'em as well as senators—plumbers as well as poets. There never yet was a human who didn't think that he was better than his job....who didn't firmly believe that he'd Show 'Em if he could only get the break.

But feeling like a prima donna doesn't prove that you could be one. It merely proves that you have an itch to see yourself in headlines—like all the rest of us.

However, even if you are a budding Bronte, Menchen, Krisler or Edison, you'll never put yourself on the map with your present program. It takes much more than the "breaks" to make genius successful. It takes, in fact, exactly the same qualities that are required to make any work successful—self control—patience—perseverance — courage — common sense. And these qualities must be acquired slowly, laboriously. You wouldn't be ready for the spot lights now, even if they turned on you. Before you can be an authentic genius you must learn to be a reliable human being. And there's only one way to learn to be that—get out and get under! Grab the first job that comes along. What sort of a job? Any sort of a job—for one job's as good for what ails you as the next.

You can learn as much about writing from "hashing" in a restaurant as from listening to Bernard Shaw. Get a job and get busy. Then if you are a genius you'll get yourself under way. And if you aren't, why you'll at least have learned to be human.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

Three

One found his days were hard, and so
He laughed at want, he laughed at woe,
He laughed at being's ebb and flow.
"It shall not conquer me," he vowed,
As wildly and with head unbowed,
At life itself he laughed aloud.
Another, when loss fell to him,
When Hatred showed its features grim
And Grief came, shadowy and dim,
Crept to his corner, crouching there
Like stricken beast within its lair,
And gave himself to dark despair
But of the three, one man was wise
And bravely to the sullen skies
He lifted clear, undaunted eyes:
"By pain," said he, "we all are taught,
By sorrow we are led to thought;
Without its struggles, life is naught!"

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

In such a case as this the gene which wins, so to speak, in the hybrid is said to be dominant to its partner, while the one which is concealed is called recessive.

"Dominant" and "recessive" are relative terms. To forget that is to drift towards very nonsensical ideas. An example of incomplete dominance appears when a white leghorn cock is mated to a brown hen of the same breed; the hybrids are white, but with one or two brown feathers here and there on the body.

H. G. Wells

White in this case is dominant to brown, but incompletely so. There are degrees of dominance, ranging from the apparent equality of red and white in the Four-o'clock to the complete submergence of waltzing by normal in mice.

We stress this point because in some of the popular writing one meets about Genetics, dominance and recessiveness are treated as things as absolutely opposite as the poles.

And let us emphasize, because it is the very quintessence of Mendelism, that the recessive gene, however obliterated, it may be in appearance, is in no way destroyed or altered.

It is masked, it is eclipsed, but it is still there. In every cell of the hybrid mice—as distinguished from the pure-bred ones—the recessive gene is present, like a quiet, henpecked husband with a wilful and noisy wife who must be obeyed.

In another generation he will get his chance in a few individual cases, get together with another of his own kind, and be as distinctive in his influence as his nature requires.

Herein lies the importance of this discussion. A recessive gene may be carried in a stock, completely hidden by a dominant partner, and may therefore be difficult to detect and to weed out.

And it may be a very sinister gene. In our own species, for example, there is a kind of inherited deafness, so complete that it leads to dumbness—deaf-mutism—which is recessive.

If a person, after the manner of the hybrid mouse with one imperceptible waltzing gene, carries one gene of this deafmute type, he or she will behave quite normally. His "taint" will not matter—to him. He will hear and speak just as the mouse will run straight.

If such a person marries a normal person without this hidden taint some of the children will be pure normals and some will be hybrid normals like the first individual.

All of these again will hear and speak. It will not affect them personally at all. But if two such "carriers" marry—and there is no way known at present of telling the pure normal from the hybrid—there is a fair chance that an abnormally carrying sperm may fertilize an abnormally-carrying ovum, producing a pure recessive, a deaf mute. It is a chance of one in four; a risk, not a certainty.

Similarly with other unpleasant recessive genes—one, for example, which produces a kind of insanity coupled with blindness, and another which produces a hideous abnormality of the embryo, which has one large eye instead of two normal ones.

They may be carried for generations undetected, and then, after an unlucky mating, their effects may come suddenly to full realization.

The fact that the genes in these gene-pairs are independent entities, emerging separate and unchanged in the gametes after their co-operation in the zygote, is known as Mendel's First Law.

It is a profoundly important law. In popular language, when one is talking of crosses and hybrids one speaks of "mixed blood," and the phrase admirably expresses the belief which lurks at the backs of many minds.

If we take two kinds of blood and mix together a pint of each we will obviously get a fifty-fifty mixture. If we mix a pint of this with a pint of one of the original kinds we shall get a twenty-five-seventy-five mixture.

If we mix a pint of this with a pint of the same original blood we shall get a twelve-and-a-half-eighty-seven-and-a-half mixture. And so on. This is parallel to our almost instinctive belief about heredity.

One expects races to mix as liquids mix. One expects red crossed with white to give pink, red with pink to give a darker three-quarters pink, red with this pink to give an even darker seven-eighths pink, and so on.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 21.—Perhaps the house with the most unusual decore in a town of mad mansions is that of Robert Chanler, the celebrated artist. The structure is one of the outmoded double brick affairs nestling in the isolated serenity of East Nineteenth street. From the sidewalk, it is merely another house.

Chanler is himself a psychic drama, magnificently performed. He has an eccentric brother who escaping from a sanitarium was declared sane in Virginia. This brother married the former Amelie Rives and when Bob Chanler married the song bird Cavaleria his brother cabled: "Who's looney now?"

Chanler is known in the lower 5th avenue art and literary circles as "Sheriff Bob." He is especially noted for his marvelous lacquer screens, mostly of Chinese designs. One screen of giraffes amid silver birches, 10 feet high and 5 feet wide was purchased from Chanler by France and hangs in the Luxembourg.

His screens of gold and silver sell for as high as $15,000. Yet it is his home that excites most comment. Like life itself, it abounds in disharmonies. The walls and ceilings are splotched with mandrils, serpents, devil fish, owls, lynxes, fish, cranes, elephants, mongoose, cobras, centipedes and scorpions.

Neighbors call it "The Crazy House." Chanler's bedroom has a bed seven feet wide and ten feet long. He is himself a giant of a man with a wild mop of snowy curls and deep set penetrating eyes. An impediment in his drawling speech accentuates a natural diffidence and he seems to bend under the might of unseen cerebration.

At one time he was sheriff of Duchess County and appointed Richard Harding Davis and other literati and artists as deputies. His study is in vivid red and wild orange stripes from which he receives vibrations. Upon the ceiling are the ugly footprints of a giant.

In the drawing room the piano cover is a zebra skin. There are other oddities too numerous to mention. Yet Chanler withal is regarded as one of the truly great American artists. He works for millionaires when the mood seizes him. But not until. And is beloved as a charming, loyal friend.

* * *

An unusual back-in-the-hollow friendship enduring through years of living in New York is that between Sam McKee, Republican leader and newly elected Exalted Ruler of the Elks, and Louis Wiley, of the New York Times. Despite McKee standing six feet and weighing 224 pounds while Wiley is five feet and weighs 140, their photographs bear a striking resemblance. They were boyhood playmates in Mt. Sterling, Ky.—a town I remember for producing Boone, the hypnotist—and came to New York to carve careers together.

* * *

Many giddy stories concern Harry Thaw's profligacy along Broadway. Yet the Pittsburgh eccentric is about as lavish in his expenditures as the late Russell Sage. The grifters long since learned that transacting business with Thaw was monkeying with a buzz saw. He is crazy like a fox. His night club expenditures have been exploited but exist chiefly in the minds of tabloid tattlers. He is one of the most careful check adders along the street and his tips are 10 per cents to the fraction. In wilder days Thaw passed out golden notes to head-waiters and orchestra leaders but not anymore. Waiters dislike to serve him because of his penury.

"In your opinion," asks T. R. S, Chicago, "who is absolutely the best of the New York columnists?"

We wouldn't know about that. And we can't help our divining rod of suspicion from twitching either!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Do you magnify your troubles and deprecate your good fortune?

You may think your misfortunes outweigh your good luck, but it is more likely you have had about a fifty-fifty break.

The reason you think you have had more bad luck than good is because you take all things in your favor as a matter of course.

The fact that you lack position and financial security is because you have not had any luck, if you were to express your opinion.

Just the same, you may be one of thousands who are without the business acumen and foresight to earn more than a daily wage.

This may be small and your necessary expense large in proportion.

You make this an excuse for not saving, but the real excuse is that you are unwilling to go without some little unnecessary things for the sake of a larger bank account.

Not without good reason you figure that your family is entitled to what you have provided and you have worked hard enough to merit all you get out of it.

But if your earning capacity is not equal to that of other men you must not lose ambition, but learn to be happy with less in proportion to your ability to earn honestly and hope your children may improve on your efforts.
